TRAPPED MAN SHOWS SIGNS OF WEAKENING

Worcester, Aug. 26.—With rescue almost accomplished, a new cave-in and settling of earth and timbers, delayed today the taking of Fred. Leneau from the 40-foot well in which he was engulfed at his Auburn home.

When the settling came, Leneau, for twenty hours entombed 40 feet below the surface and jammed by timbers and by dank earth whose temperature was only eight degrees above freezing, was fast weakening.

Oxygen was being fed him through a long tube. The first oxygen was given at the end of 18 hours in the caved-in well, just before the diggers came upon him.

"I am encouraged, I am encouraged," Leneau said weakly when the diggers, their parallel-perpendicular shaft breaking into his "tomb" less than three feet above his timber-pressed head, told him they would have him out then in less than two hours.

The weary diggers could see that one of the bracings that

The shooting ended a furious chase for miles along the Newburyport turnpike by Sergt. Raymond Kirwin and Patrolman Harold Skinner of Danvers. Shots from their revolvers, directed at th tires of the speeding car penetrated the side of the car, one of the bullets striking Welch in the chest and puncturing a lung.

Coasting at the wheel, Welch had presence of mind to shut off the engine and the car stopped in Dan-

REDFERN SIGHTED 300 MILES OFF BAHAMAS

St. Petersburg, Fla., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—A radio message from station VAQF, Nassau, picked up here by the Financial Journal's 40-meter wireless station today, said that the Port of Brunswick, piloted by Paul Redfern, was sighted 300 miles east of the British Bahamas by a steamship.

The steamship arrived at Nassau at 11:40 p. m. last night and reported that the plane on its non-stop flight to Brazil was flying at an altitude of about 2,000 feet, headed in a southerly direction.

After traversing Dutch Guiana, Redfern expected to steer for Macapa, on the north bank of the Amazon river. It was there he said he would decide whether to turn to Pernambuco or continue to Rio de Janeiro.

HOLDS MOTORMAN AS DRUNK; CRASH HURT 9

Charged with drunkenness and gross negligence, Ernest R. Osborne, operator of a one-man Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway car that crashed into another of the Boston Elevated in East Boston last night, when nine passengers were injured, was held in $2,000 today in East Boston Court. Osborne pleaded not guilty.

Osborne was taken from the car vestibule and placed under arrest immediately after the crash. According to police testimony he was very much under the influence of liquor. His home is at No. 6 Cedar street, Roxbury.

The crash occurred at Porter and Bennington streets, East Boston. The Elevated car had stopped to let off several passengers. Osborne's car, which was following close behind, crashed into the car in front with such force that passengers were knocked off their seats.

Three of the injured were treated at the East Boston Relief Hospital and six others were attended by physicians in the vicinity and later went to their homes. Both cars were badly damaged and traffic was delayed for a time.

Buried Alive in Well ~ Auburn Man Clings to Life ~ As Rescuers Dig Frantically

FATHER SPEECHLESS
Edward Leneau was so overcome he was unable to call down the shaft to his son.

WAITING FOR THE RESCUE
Hundreds gathered near the scene, encouraging the efforts of the rescuers and anxiously hoping Leneau would be saved.

WORKERS RACING AGAINST DEATH
Sixty men, working in relays, have been working night and day to reach imprisned victim before his strength gives out and it is too late.

had collapsed was across the back of Leneau's neck; that another was across and impressing his stomach and that one of his hands was jammed in earth and timber up in front of his face and twisted almost backwards.

Carefully, lest a new shower of broken timbers and heavy earth be sent down upon the imprisoned man, the workers transferred shovel after shovel of the binding earth up to the first shoveling platform, from where it was thrown higher to the second deck by other workers, then shoveled to the third deck and finally was hurled up on the surface.

Meanwhile, at the rescue-shaft's rim, waited two doctors—Manfred Spaulding of Auburn and Richard Shanahan, Worcester police surgeon —with everything in readiness to give Leneau first aid in preparation for a race of four miles to the Worcester City Hospital.

PNEUMONIA FEARED

The surgeons feared either pneumonia, from Leneau's long siege in the wet well, packed in damp earth, or the formation of a blood clot as a result of the timbers blocking his circulation.

The oxygen, pumped down earlier, revived Leneau considerably.

"A little higher," he was heard to say, and the workers took courage as they raised the end of the oxygen tube, for they had not heard his voice in an hour and then only weakly.

"That's better." Leneau said from his deep trap after the adjustment was made and the oxygen came nearer his face.

ALL NIGHT BATTLE

It was a battle that had been waged all night, from the first dread hour when Mrs. Leneau, young wife and mother, heard the crackling timbers and the muffled cry of horror that came out of the still tumbling earth when she raced to what had been a well with her husband working at the bottom.

Leneau, although weak, was still courageous 12 hours following his sudden entombment, despite the fact he was numbed by cold, injured to what extent he did not know, and was held in an upright position by the press of lumber and earth about him.

"We are coming down soon," was cried down to him today by the Rev. Fr. Joseph Keating, who administered last rites to the entombed man last night.

Shouting down through the one interstice in the caved-in earth and cracked cribbing—the only chink from surface to the point where Leneau is caught—Fr. Keating assured: "Don't give up hope. We will reach you soon."

NUMBED AND COLD

"Merci, father," came back the faint voice of Leneau. "I will hold courage. But I'm numb with cold."

So fearful were the wearied diggers that attempts to converse with Leneau would weaken him that they agreed with a doctor that none but necessary talk would be held. Up to that time, however, Leneau had sent several reassuring messages to his wife and two small children.

"Tell her not to worry; everything will come out all right," was his last message after he had asked why his wife's voice had not been heard by him through the earth chink.

He was told that so wearied was Mrs. Leneau with her efforts to aid her husband that the doctor on the surface had ordered her to lie down lest she collapse.

It was Mrs. Leneau who discovered her husband's plight after she had heard from the house the cracking of his timbers with which he had been shoring the well.

FATHER CAN'T SPEAK

It was mere chance that Mrs. Leneau had not been at the well with him when the walls caved in, for it has been her custom to work with him on the deep hole after he returned evenings from his regular job as a moulder.

There was one pathetic moment at the brink of the earth and timber-filled hole today, a moment that brought tears to the eyes of the crowd gathered back of the dead-line established by Auburn and Worcester police and State troopers.

Leneau's father, Edward Leneau, learning of the catastrophe, arrived on the scene almost in a state of collapse and was led to the well and the adjoining rescue shaft by Police Chief Allen who believed a word from the father would further reassure the son trapped below.

But when the elder Leneau, tottering on the brink of the yawning hole, leaned over on the arm of the chief, a sob shook his body, his knees sagged and the words that he sought refused to pass his lips. He was led away and the son was not told of his presence.

Leneau's brother Arthur did call out reassurance repeatedly through the long hours of digging.

"We're getting down fast, Fred," the brother called down just before he tottered up out of the hole, himself too weak, from fatigue, to stand.

"Fine," came the feeble response from below, but Leneau had been asked, too, not to attempt to talk much.

WELL IS LIGHTED

"I'm standing on a pipe, about ten feet over the water," the trapped man had told his rescuers, as they attempted to find out just how he was situated, as a guide to their best method of approach when they reach his level.

"There's a two-by-four across my chest and it feels like a rib was broken. I'm packed in, standing up. There's wood across my legs and my hands are up almost level with my face. I can't move them."

Leneau was in such a position that he could not see a thin feeding tube that was wriggled down 40 feet to him through the earth chinks.

There was light for him, however, for a bulb at the end of a long, semi-rigid cord, had been wriggled down in the same manner.

The trapped man said the bulb was not visible to him but the light filtering through the earth chinks was welcome.

A thin, miner's hose was also wriggled down the 40 feet to be in readiness in case the air should give out at that depth, in which event fresh air could be pumped down through the hose.

Workers in the attempt to rescue Leneau through the long hours were police and firemen of Auburn and Worcester, members of the Worcester sewer department with steam scoops and modern paraphernalia, members of the Auburn American Legion Post under Commander Henry Sosville and many relatives of Leneau and other civilian volunteers.

NEW SHAFT IS SUNK

The Worcester sewer department put practically its entire force of men on the rescue job.

For the rescue work, a shaft was sunk beside the original well shaft, the plan being to sink this parallel-perpendicular shaft to a point below Leneau's earth-gripped body and then cut through from one shaft to the other, taking Leneau out from below, through the ten-foot chamber between the water level and the height of the pipe on which he was standing when the cave-in came.

Leneau, a moulder, had been digging the well in the rear of his modest home for several weeks, with his wife's assistance.

As the shaft went down, he shored and braced the sides with 2x4 timbers, but apparently their size was not heavy enough for the weight of the mobile clay strata encountered at several levels.

Mrs. Leneau was working in the house when she heard the crack of the breaking timbers that let the cave-in down on her 37-year-old husband.

Rushing from the house, she screamed when she discovered her fear realized. Several houses away, Mrs. Adrian La Prade, hearing the screams and sighting Mrs. Leneau beside the well, rushed over in the belief that one of the children had been bumped into the hole by the dog.

Mrs. Delima Gardner was also attracted by the screams, and the two neighbors notified the police and fire departments instantly. Chief Allen, realizing the town workers themselves could not hope to accomplish such a rescue task in speedy fashion, put in a request for skilled aid from Worcester, which was granted immediately and men and apparatus despatched.

FLOOD LIGHTS SET UP

Darkness came on within a short time after the rescuers began work, but by that time a score of motorists had arrived on the scene and they trained their headlights on the spot where a life was trapped below.

Later, flood lights were brought and set up because the ever-increasing throng of curious made it necessary that both cars and pedestrians be moved far back lest their great weight press the earth forward and cause another cave.

The American Legion post of Auburn was just beginning a meeting when word of the cave-in came. They hurriedly adjourned and, without a vote, hurried in a body to the Leneau yard and gave their services, working all through the night.

Several hours after the rescue work had started, Edwin Ellis, one of the volunteers, collapsed from fatigue and was treated by a physician, after which he was sent to his home in Seward street, Auburn. Two women and one male spectator also fainted from excitement.

For refreshment to the workers, Mrs. La Prade and Mrs. Gardner, with other women neighbors, made and served coffee and sandwiches to the workers throughout the night.

Leneau's plight marks the second time he has been trapped in a well in a year, according to neighbors, who said that last year, Leneau, in his first attempt to locate water on his property, was trapped in a cave in above his waist and had to be dug out.

FLOYD COLLINS' DEATH IN CAVE IS RECALLED

The entombment of Fred Leneau in a well at Auburn, resembles in some respects the tragic experience of Floyd Collins, who was trapped in Sand Cave, Kentucky, in 1925.

Collins, who had spent much time during his life in exploring the underground passages that abound in the Cave City section of Kentucky, was pinned in Sand Cave by a seven-ton boulder on Friday, Jan. 30.

He had been exploring a newly-discovered underground chamber, Crystal Cave, and was crawling out through narrow Sand Cave when the boulder dropped on his foot and ankle, anchoring him securely to the spot.

It was not until the following morning that his predicament was discovered by two friends, who crawled through the long passage until they came to where he was trapped.

At Collins' request, they summoned his brothers, Marshall and Homer, who made fruitless attempts to rescue Floyd, but were forced to content themselves with furnishing blankets, food and drink.

The next day, Sunday, neighbors started the work of attempted rescue, the number of workers increasing constantly as news of Collins' plight became known. Louisville newspaper reporters made frenzied efforts to free the victim, wriggling down the shaft time after time, but in vain.

Collins, who could talk with the rescuers, was in agony at the end of the fourth day's imprisonment, and whiskey was taken in to him by volunteers. The entire county was aroused by this time, and State officials took charge of the work of rescue, with engineers directing the sinking of shafts. At the end of seventeen days the gigantic task was accomplished, but the victim was dead.

QUARREL OVER SWEETHEART SUSPECTED

Streator, Ill., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Search for Harry D. Hill, 21-year-old youth who disappeared the morning after his mother's body was found in a shallow basement grave at their home, today was extended throughout the country after it was learned that he had overhauled his automobile and financed himself with a forged check, apparently in anticipation of his flight.

Young Hill was to have been married this Fall, and had visited his sweetheart, Miss Alice Sawyer, on Sunday night. The body was found the following day. She still believes Hill had no connection with the slaying.

Friends said she was not favored by Hill's mother and it was pointed out that he might have had a fatal quarrel with his mother over the girl.

The sudden departure of Chief of Police Robb and the reported leaving of Dr. H. C. Hill for Chicago led to belief today that trace of Hill had been obtained.

There is current talk in Streator that negotiations are under way for his return. The coroner's inquest into the death of his mother will be resumed tomorrow.

The garage where young Hill had his motor car repaired reported that he had given them a check for $480 in payment of a $150 bill and that he had been given the $330 change. The check, signed by his mother, was returned by the bank marked "forged."

Suspicion was directed at the youth in connection with his mother's death immediately after her body, with a bullet hole in the head, was found by her estranged husband, Dr. H. C. Hill, wealthy eye specialist, f

HUB'S NEW AIRPORT OPENED AT ATLANTIC

FLYING SCHOOL FOR 100 BEGINS AT FIELD

Boston's second airport, the Dennison field at Atlantic, opened today when Pilots Allan P. Bourdon and Franklin T. Kurt soared aloft in Waco biplanes accompanied by student fliers. The opening was without formality. Motors were warmed up and the machines took off from the newly made field.

The 20-acre landing field is entirely of artificial construction, the earth having been dredged from the Neponset river bed.

The Dennison Aircraft Corporation, of which Harold T. Dennison of Atlantic is president, announces that approximately 100 students have applied for training. Pilot Kurt, former president of the Tech Aero Club, will have charge of the ground training. Pilot Bourdon, aided by Kurt, will direct the air work.

WOMAN TEACHES FLYING.

Miss Amelia Harbeart, the only licensed woman pilot in this section of the country, is on the training staff. Though only 25 years old, she has been a licensed pilot for 10 years, and for several years held the world's altitude record for women.

The training staff will be enlarged within a short time. Three planes were in use at the field today, two Wacos and a Kinner. The corporation is awaiting delivery of three additional Wacos and another Kinner.

In addition to the land fleet the Dennison Corporation has acquired a flying boat, to be used in carrying passengers or for giving students instruction in that type of machine.

'L' TIEUP MAKES SCORES LATE FOR WORK

Hundreds of workers living in the Hyde Park district were delayed from reaching their places of employment in the city early today when a broken trolley wire at the Forest Hills terminal tied up traffic on the Cleary Square line for nearly an hour. . . .

The delay occurred at the peak of the early morning rush hour and for at least half an hour not a single surface car was sent over the busy route. At each stop along the line crowds of patrons waited for the delayed cars, while hundreds preferred to walk the distance between Cleary Square and the Forest Hills station.

When the break had been repaired a string of six cars was sent out to pick up the waiting passengers, but a further tie-up was caused when they were halted outside the Forest Hills terminal for a check up by Elevated officials. This delayed others for another five minutes from boarding inbound trains.

POLICEMEN GET PERMIT TO BURY CAT

With sorrowing mien and footsteps halting and slow, a detail of Revere police today laid at rest all that was mortal of Matilda, late beloved cat mascot of police headquarters.

Victim of a broken heart, according to the police, Matilda laid down her nine lives when Fred A. Rollins, custodian of the building, went away on vacation. He had neglected to inform Matilda of his going, and believing herself deserted, she closed her eyes in death, leaving behind her a record of having brought nearly 100 kittens into the world.

The funeral took place with all due form at 1 ceremony, a burial permit having been obtained from the Revere Board of Health, in which the deceased was referred to as a widow.

While a stray dog, locked in a cell, bayed mournful requiem, Sergeant John F. Blythe, with Officers James L. Duggan and John Delaney, bore the casket to a plot beside police headquarters, where it was interred. The casket was only a pine box, but the mourners made up in grief what the funeral lacked in trappings.

As the last rites were being performed, and the casket was lowered into the grave, and Sergeant Blythe scattered earth upon it, girl clerks and stenographers leaning from City Hall windows across the street, wept bitterly.

The mourners stood by the grave with bared heads for a few moments, while they repeated silent prayers for the departed, and then the goutine was picked up once more.

WILL 'SUPPORT' ELOPING WIFE

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Although refusing to take his erring wife back into his home, John W. Bache, wealthy iron manufacturer, is willing to see that she never is in want.

Mrs. Bache eloped five months ago with Joseph C. Dever, a former town policeman. They were found Wednesday in Columbus, O., where Dever was arrested for abandoning his wife and infant. Mrs. Bache was told she could return to her home.

Bache, however, declared this could not be. "I wish her no harm or unhappiness," he said. "I imagine she has been punished already.

"Mrs. Bache shall never need the material things in life, if she will let me supply them. If she were hungry or cold I would be the first to rush to her aid.

"But as for taking her back as a life partner, that is impossible."

Mrs. Bache, who is 38 years old, 17 years her husband's junior, left home she said because she found it a "drab life."

WOMAN AND 3 BOYS SAVED AT BIDDEFORD POOL, ME.

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—The rescue from drowning of four Simmer residents of Biddeford Pool became known today. Three boys, J. Gray Emmons and Stuart Emmons of Philadelphia and Harry Busby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stockton Busby of Cincinnati, had been swept seaward by a strong undertow. Oliver Richards of St. Louis, who swam to their assistance, became exhausted.

B. Delvroon of Wallingford, Ct., rescued Stuart Emmons and lifeguards brought the others ashore.

RENEW APPEAL FOR HUB'S BIG AIR PRIZE

With the announcement of the appointment today of Theodore G. Holcombe, as secretary of the trustees of the $25,000 Boston Airport Transatlantic purse, came a renewed appeal to the business men of Boston to contribute to the completion of the fund.

Holcombe, who is president of the Boston chapter of the National Aeronautic Association, says in his appeal that the purse to be presented to the first transatlantic aviator to land in the Boston Airport, is designed not only to advance the cause of aviation locally, but also to spread the fame of Boston and its opportunities throughout the world. A supplementary statement was made by W. Irving Bullard, member of the trustees, pointing out that Boston's airport is the most easily accessible landing field on the way from France. He said:

NEXT STEP IN AVIATION.

"The westward transatlantic flight is the next logical development in the progress of aviation. European aviators are but waiting for favorable weather before taking off on perhaps the most difficult non-stop flight yet undertaken.

"The Boston Airport Transatlantic purse is designed to reward brave and capable men for their achievement. It will in part serve to defray the cost of the undertaking. Primarily it will serve to attract to Boston the pioneer flight which undoubtedly will soon be made.

"Boston is the logical terminus for the westward transatlantic flight. It is much nearer Europe than is New York or other large American ports. The purse will serve to encourage the European fliers to take the safest course to the nearest American objective.

BOSTON'S ADVANTAGES.

"This purse is designed to call attention to Boston's advantages, geographical, industrial and commercial, and I believe that the business men of Boston should support it to the full extent."

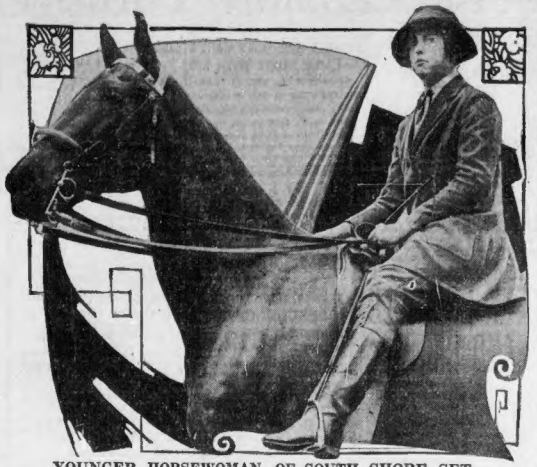
BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT



YOUNGER HORSEWOMAN OF SOUTH SHORE SET

Little Miss Lydia Lund, after participating in the Cohasset Horse Show, moved on to Scituate where she had entered her mount in competition.

Vladimir Rosing Planning for Winter Season in Boston for His American Opera Company; at Stillington, Sept. 3

HAVING SUNG THEIR WAY THIS SUMMER INTO THE HEARTS OF NORTH SHORE Society, Vladimir Rosing and his American Opera troupe now contemplate a Winter season in town. Thus may the elect, who adore their opera of a Winter, have it served up to them in "grand opera" way, and in "opera intime" way as well. Unprecedented success has been the company's portion which sings its farewell at Stillington on the evening of September 3 in its most ambitious production—"The Abduction from the Seraglio."

PLANS FOR THE WINTER season have not yet reached the stage that permits of definite announcements as to time and place, but Mr. Rosing, Mrs. William Carrington, Mrs. Edward Stillman Kelley, Wallace Goodrich and other leaders in "Opera Intime" presentations are holding almost daily conferences on such details. But wherever and whenever they are given, Boston is sure to give this newest form of musical fare its most enthusiastic and brilliant support.

TO STILLINGTON HALL IN Gloucester, brilliant audiences continue to flock. Each evening of the "Fool's Paradise" presentation finds smart people watching the clever development of the play penned by that clever young matron, Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman. To say that the play is a great success is but putting the thing mildly. For Mrs. Whitman, would she but take them, there could be countless curtain calls. For Mr. Buswell and Miss Lamon, Mr. Huston, Hugh Miller and the others in the talented cast, the show literally stops until they have come out again and again.

MOST OFTEN MRS. WHITMAN may be found sitting in the very last row, bright-eyed and alert to watch the unfolding of "Fool's Paradise." To linger in the limelight is not the Whitman way, but ardent admirers nevertheless seek her out to offer congratulations. Mrs. Whitman was very stunning in a simple frock of black net for the second presentation of her play. The Graeme Haughtons brought a party that evening. Mrs. Bernard Weld was in the audience, with a shawl-like wrap of brilliantly-tinted metal cloth over her velvet gown. Miss Suzette Sturgis and her sister, Miss Anita Sturgis, were here. Mr. and Mrs. George Swift had reservations.

MRS. ROBERT TREAT PAINE, in black net, had guests for Mrs. Whitman's play. Of the young people there was the bright-eyed Miss Barbara Welch, daughter of Mrs. Hinkley Welch, with some of her own contemporaries. Miss Welch and her brother, Francis, have been almost as constant attendants at Stillington as have their mother, who is an opera and musicale subscriber. Perfectly at home in their roles as ushers are the two daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Maynard Ladd.

MISS GABRIELLA LADD, with a kerchief scarf about her shoulders, and Miss Vernon, demure in white, afford a remarkable contrast, the first with dark locks cut à la garçonne, the last with golden hair smoothly banded about her head. They are with their parents at Arden, the country home deep in Beverly Farms woods, where Mrs. Ladd has her Summer studio and where, later in the season, Miss Vernon is to make her social debut. Both daughters have been students at Vassar, and Miss Vernon is the second to essay the social field. They are serving at Stillington very cleverly.

THE MYOPIA TRIUMVIRATE on Horse Show affairs, Bayard Tuckerman, Augustus F. Goodwin and James Appleton, are following the racing game ardently at Saratoga and return this way only in time to put the finishing touches on Myopia Show arrangements. Meanwhile Thomas G. Frothingham, that veteran in such affairs and immersed in preliminaries for the big society show, uses superlatives when mentioning it. It's the "biggest" and "sportiest" and "most interesting" event in the Myopia's brilliant history, so says Mr. Frothingham, and he should know!

LITTLE MISS LYDIA LUND, Riding Club member and one of the bright lights among the South Shore riders, may be frequently found dashing over the Shore's bridal paths. Miss Lund's horses were entered in the recent Cohasset Show, that brought out several hundred blue-blooded equines, and then she moved on, with other South Shore horse lovers, to the Scituate Show that followed almost immediately after. Small riders atop tall horses were a big feature of both shows, which are now well established as part of the Horse Show round that society follows so eagerly.

SACCO COMMITTEE GIVEN PERMIT FOR PROCESSION SUNDAY

WILL INCLUDE A BAND BUT ROUTE OF MARCH IS DIVERTED FROM THE STATE HOUSE

a block long and constantly growing streamed past the caskets containing the bodies of the executed radicals.

CROWDS VIEW BODIES

Boston has seldom witnessed such a scene as was presented by the long line of men, women and children that led to the little chapel.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will have viewed the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti by nightfall, according to police estimates. Throughout today 35 a minute, or 2,100 an hour, were passing without a break in and out of the place.

Viewing of the bodies had continued from 7:30 last night throughout the night. After midnight only occasional groups entered but night workers began to arrive in the early morning hours, and as early as 4 o'clock there was a line waiting.

During the day, college girls stood next to children in tattered clothing, and well-dressed youths rubbed elbows with laborers, of the long file. Many of the children who entered the chapel were unable to see into the caskets, but they were hurried along without a second chance.

Business men in nearby stores protested that the line was blocking the entrances, and as a result the line was shifted to the other side, where it passed only tenement houses.

CHANGE FUNERAL ROUTE

A permit for a long funeral procession was granted today by the Board of Street Commissioners, but, in making this concession, the officials specified a route that does not pass the State House.

There will be a band in the procession. It was said, unofficially, that the determination to have a band resulted sympathizers from getting a permit that would let them take the Beacon Hill route past the Capitol.

The procession will start from Langone's chapel, No. 353 Hanover street, at 2 p. m., Sunday, with the bodies in hearses, and not carried by pallbearers as at first planned.

The route will be Hanover street to Scollay square; through Tremont street to Roxbury Crossing; through Columbus avenue to Egleston square; along Washington street to Forest Hills, to Hyde Park avenue, Walk Hill street and Forest Hills Cemetery.

A provision was later added to the permit by the Street Commissioners, that "the bodies to be interred shall be carried in hearses, and that no placards, or banners of that description be carried or shown by any persons marching in said procession."

The ashes of both Sacco and Vanzetti are going to New York, and those of Vanzetti are going to Paris and Rome—for public exhibition in each place—according to Aldino Felicani of the defense committee.

Following cremation of the bodies on Sunday, the ashes will be taken to New York, there to be carried at the head of a parade on Monday and placed on view in some public hall, Felicani said. The parade will be on Fifth avenue if sympathizers can procure such a permit, it was said.

Several American and European cities have requested the ashes, but Sacco's will not leave this country, according to the committee spokesman.

Countless floral tributes arrived today at the undertaker's, among these being a large wreath from a society in San Francisco. For the first time in many hours the steady flow of persons into the place was halted when an automobile filled to overflowing with funeral pieces drew up to the curb and was emptied.

IN DOUBLE LINE

During the afternoon the line lengthened so that police were forced to double it back along the street from the end of the block to which it extended on the sidewalk. In spite of efforts of the police to keep everybody moving from the scene, the crowd of onlookers steadily increased.

Reserves were held in readiness at the Hanover street police station in case of emergency.

The guard of honor standing by the flower-surrounded caskets will be changed morning and night until the funeral. Three men will be on guard at all times. Those on duty today were Julius Pushimi, Frank Colabelli and Morris Tildorn. From time to time different members of the defense committee arrived and stood silent watch.

Unless something unforeseen occurs to cause a change, the doors of the undertaking rooms will not be closed until the funeral hour, and as long as those who wish to view the bodies are orderly they will be permitted to file in any and all hours, day and night.

Bay State Detective Ends Vigil in McHardy Bomb Case

Newark, N. J., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Detectives who waited at the Robert Treat Hotel for over a week for a person who claimed to have knowledge of the bombing of a Sacco-Vanzetti juror's home in East Milton, Mass., were withdrawn today.

Massachusetts authorities believed that the bombing of the home of Lewis J. McHardy, the juror, was the work of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

A few days after the explosion they received a letter postmarked Newark and signed "Mary L."

The writer said she had overheard a conversation and learned the names of the perpetrators and the source of the explosive and would impart the information to McHardy if he would insert an advertisement in the personal columns of a New York newspaper, stating where they could meet.

Massachusetts State Detective Ernest S. Bradford came here and placed an advertisement in the paper, suggesting that "Mary L." come to the Robert Treat, where he was staying.

He registered at the hotel as L. J. McHardy, and detectives were assigned to guard the hotel in case another attempt was made to injure "McHardy," Bradford.

Other advertisements failed to bring any reply, and Bradford returned to Massachusetts.

Worcester Bar Lauds Thayer for Fairness in Sacco Trial

Worcester, Aug. 26 (A.P.).—Members of the Worcester County Bar Association at a farewell banquet to Justice Harold H. Hartwell drafted resolutions commending Justice Webster Thayer on his stand in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Mr. Hartwell sails tomorrow for the American Legion convention in Paris. The resolution follows:

"The members of the Worcester County Bar Association extend to Mr. Justice Webster Thayer their felicitations and hearty approval of his judicial conduct in the recent trial of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Fairness throughout the long and tedious trial in preserving for the defendants all of their constitutional rights, which at that time met with open and public approval of defense counsel, is heartily commended. Every effort was put forth by the defendants, realizing his duty to the great commonwealth which he so honorably serves, we applaud his stand for upholding law, at any cost, to the end that the sacred traditions of Massachusetts, that this is a government of law and not of men, is the watchword of right-thinking and sober-minded citizens of the commonwealth."

Sacco Committee Plans to Hire N. Y. Yankee Stadium

New York, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—The Sacco-Vanzetti memorial committee of Boston, a newly-formed organization, today continued a search here for a hall to display the ashes of the two Anarchists, beginning Monday.

Efforts to obtain Madison Square Garden failed when Tex Rickard wired his refusal from Chicago. It was understood the committee also met with rejections from the managements of the Polo Grounds and Carnegie Hall.

France Will Guard U.S. Legion Parade From Radicals

Paris, Aug. 26 (A.P.).—To make amends for the desecration of the Unknown Soldier's tomb during Tuesday night's rioting, all members of the cabinet, at the conclusion of the Council of Ministers today, repaired to the national shrine and Premier Poincare placed a large wreath, tied with a tricolor ribbon, on the tomb. The ministers stood uncovered for two minutes of silence.

Albert Sarraut, minister of the interior, previously announced measures to see that the American Legion parade on Sept. 19 shall not be troubled by Communists and Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

SACCO PICKETS APPEAL $10 FINES

Fines of $10 each were assessed on three Sacco-Vanzetti pickets—Powers Hapgood, John Dos Passos and George Kraska—by Judge William Sullivan in Municipal Court today, all being found guilty of violating on August 20 in front of the State House a city ordinance against loitering.

They appealed and read prepared statements in which they declared their aim was "to prevent justice from being crucified with Sacco and Vanzetti," "to prevent a gross miscarriage of justice," and "to protest against a brutal frame-up."

A fourth defendant, Paxten Hibben of Indianapolis, was found not guilty. He declared in his own defense that he heard no warning from the police to leave the scene within seven minutes. The other defendants testified they did not receive this warning personally, but admitted hearing it given to others.

The complaining officers were Lieutenant John McGrath and Sergeant John Manning of Joy street division.

Hapgood, who is a young Harvard graduate, formerly prominent in mining localities during labor disputes, was arrested two or three times for "death marching" in front of the State House and was once sent to the Psychopathic Hospital, where he was pronounced sane. Dos Passos, also a Harvard graduate, is an author of note.

French Police Inspector Stabbed at Sacco Meeting

Havre, France, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Police Inspector Elygalan was stabbed and thrown out of a hall in which a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting was being carried on. The police official was injured so seriously that he was taken to a hospital. Search has been started for his assailant.

Borah Favorable to Sacco Probe in U. S. Files

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—United States Senator William E. Borah will welcome a Congressional investigation to remove any question of doubt about what files of the Department of Justice will reveal as to the guilt or innocence of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, he said here.

"But I don't think the files will show anything," he added. "I have a telegram from the Attorney-General's office quite emphatic and complete, declaring there is nothing in the files bearing on the guilt or innocence of the two men."

WEEK-END COLD AND RAINY

Continued subnormal August temperatures with a probable dash of rain tonight or tomorrow morning will be the week-end entree served up by the local Weather Bureau.

Trippers to northern New England over Saturday and Sunday are hereby officially notified of temperatures below 50 throughout that section with the mercury reaching a minimum mark of 36 above at Greenville, Me.

SOCIETY GIRL DOES MARY'S LAMB STUNT WITH KID

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—The latest fad in pets in this exclusive seaside resort is a baby goat. Miss Lilly D. Cushing set it. She caused eyebrows to be raised when in a red dress she carried a pure white baby goat under one arm.

FIVE HURT AS STORM LASHES FOUR LINERS

New York, Aug. 26 (I.N.S.).—Five persons were injured, an aged man leaped into the sea and 300 third-class passengers knelt in hysterical prayer as a raging storm lashed four ocean liners which came into New York from 24 to 36 hours late today.

REDFERN SIGHTED BY STEAMER 300 MILES EAST OF BAHAMAS

BRAZIL FLIER REPORTED AT 2,000 FEET ALTITUDE

(A.P.)—If Paul Redfern, Georgia aviator, passed over Porto Rico during the night, his passage was unobserved so far as any reports received here this morning indicate.

Aviators said today that the lighthouses along the coast of Porto Rico as well as the reflected lights of farms and cities on the island would be sufficiently strong to aid him greatly in keeping his course if he came within twenty-five to seventy-five miles of the island. Locally the weather was reported excellent throughout the night.

(Redfern was expected to pass Porto Rico about 2 a. m., Eastern Standard Time).

Brazilian Warships Ready to Aid Redfern

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Aug. 26 (N.S.)—All night long the Brazilian radio station at Para was on the alert for steamship messages reporting the progress of Aviator Redfern's flight from Brunswick, Ga., to this city, but at dawn no word had been received.

Minister of Marine Admiral Pinto has ordered the flotilla of warcraft stationed at the mouth of the Amazon to be ready to render any assistance in the event of accident.

"You Can't Stop Paul!" Says Mrs. Redfern

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 26 (N.S.)—"You cannot stop Paul when he makes up his mind to do anything. I have the utmost confidence in him."

A brave smile accompanied these words today from Mrs. Blanche Redfern, mother of Paul Redfern, the flying musician," who is winging his way over desolate seas and mountains to his goal—Brazil.

"Goodbye, mother dear. Will cable you from Brazil." Redfern telegraphed his mother before hopping off from Brunswick, Ga., on his attempted 4,600-mile non-stop flight.

Mrs. Redfern and her daughter, Mabelle, 15, are visiting Redfern's grandmother here. Paul was born in Rochester and visits here frequently.

"I would love to be with Paul," declared Isabelle, who has accompanied her brother on several flights.

The subject of Paul's flight is supposedly taboo in the Redfern household here and relatives say that Mrs. Redfern never mentions her son's hazardous undertaking.

Redfern has talked of airplanes since he was nine years of age, according to his friends here. His first matchbox was home made, manufactured from the part of an abandoned army plane near Columbia, S. C. Redfern has been flying for ten years and never had a serious accident. His hobbies are music and mechanics.

His father is Dr. Fred C. Redfern, a minister, dean of Benedict College, Columbia, S. C. The family previously lived in Boise, Idaho, and Portsmouth, O. The flier's wife, Gertrude, who witnessed his hopoff for Brazil, is a former Toledo, O., girl.

YOUTH SHOT IN CHASE DYING

vers square. The youth was taken out unconscious and rushed to the Salem Hospital in an auto the police commandeered.

He was placed on the operating table and later his name was added to the danger list. Doctors say his injury is serious and he has but a fighting chance to live.

It was shortly after noon when the two police, who on the lookout for a thief responsible for more than a dozen automobile thefts in Danvers in the last week, saw Welch approaching in a car they knew was stolen. They signalled him to stop, but he put on full speed in the direction of Danvers Highlands.

Welch was formerly employed on the farm of Thomas Whitesides in Danvers Highlands. His mother is said to live in East Boston.

AIRPORT OPENS AT ATLANTIC

the corporation will provide joyhop and aerial taxi service. The taxi service will be for persons wishing speedy travel between Boston and any point in the east. The charge is on an hourly basis.

$50,000 HANGAR.

The main hangar at the field and the headquarters offices, all housed under one roof, is perhaps the most elaborate building of its kind in the east. It was erected at a cost of about $50,000. It houses five planes. There is a large general office, a private office, and an airplane showroom. The interiors, walls and ceilings are painted with air scenes. On the floor above is a classroom for students. The corporation will have its own fire department, consisting of an automobile chemical engine.

The present landing field, approximately 600-800 feet wide and 1,500 feet long, will be extended within a few weeks to a length of 2,200 feet. The runways are bisecting, in the form of a letter "X," enabling pilots to take off from any point of the compass.

PLAN "AIRPLANE GARAGE."

The field will be lighted for night flying. A powerful revolving beacon will be maintained to mark location of the field.

The corporation announces the field is open for the use of all aviators and additional hangars are planned for transient planes.

The Atlantic airport is the first of a chain of airports the corporation proposes to establish in New England. A field will be developed at Hyannis. Another at Taftville, near Providence, is under consideration. A third at Lowell is under survey.

$4000 SLANDER AWARD STANDS

The $4,000 verdict awarded by a Superior Court jury in the suit of Mrs. Frances Gray, Back Bay contractress, against the Rev. Franklin Knotts, stands, according to a decision by Judge Frederick J. McLeod who today denied a motion of the defendant to set aside the verdict on the ground it was excessive.

Mrs. Gray charged the Rev. Mr. Knotts with slander in accusing her of keeping liquor, and also with interfering with her business, he being the owner of the apartment house in which she was an occupant.

STUCK BY HUBBY ON WRECK

Captain John J. Taylor, with a crew of six men, and Mrs. Lorway Morris, the second mate's wife. The craft was bound from Apple River, N. S., for New York, with a cargo of tiling.

On Wednesday, when 25 miles north of Cape Cod she ran into a terrific gale. The great seas swept over the vessel and her seams were strained. The crew worked persistently at the pumps, but it was useless. Late in the afternoon the schooner filled.

As she settled in the water the deckload of tiling was swept off. The shrouds on both sides were carried away and main and mizzenmasts were broken off at the deck. The sails were torn to shreds.

The aft and forward houses were washed clean of their contents and the partitions smashed to bits. All the spare clothing, drinking water and most of the food aboard was lost.

Rescuing a few canned goods from the cabin, all took to the top of the afterhouse. Tossed by the seas, the vessel wallowed and drifted helplessly until she was sighted at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by the Coast Guard destroyer Henley 45 miles southeast of Highland Light, at the tip of Cape Cod.

The Henley, after some difficulty, made fast a towing line and offered to take Mrs. Morris off. She refused, saying she would stay with her husband. The destroyer gave the refugees a jug of water. As the waves had subsided the destroyer had no difficulty in towing the Minas Princess into Vineyard Haven.

Captain Taylor and members of the crew praised Mrs. Morris for her courage. Although weary from their long stay in cramped positions and exposure to wind and water, Mrs. Morris and the two-man crew were in good condition when they were landed here.

$50,000 PLANT SEIZED IN CHELMSFORD DRY RAID

Lowell, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Federal prohibition agents today raided a liquor manufacturing plant in Chelmsford, a suburb, and seized $50,000 orth of paraphernalia, alcohol and other ingredients. Fifteen hundred gallons of alcohol found on the premises, together with fifty-one barrels in a nearby storehouse, were confiscated. Joseph Trombley of Chelmsford, said to be the operator, was summoned to appear before U. S. Commissioner R. B. Welch [illegible]

Schluter, Given $25 by Jensen for Hop, To Get $2,500

Honolulu, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Backers of Pilot Martin Jensen, whose plane finished second in the Dole flight race from Oakland, Cal., announced that they had decided to pay $2,500 to Paul Schluter of San Francisco, who navigated the plane. It was learned from Schluter yesterday that he had received only $25 from Jensen and the promise of steamship transportation back to the mainland.

San Francisco, Aug. 26 (A.P.). The Chronicle says Captain Schluter offered $500 for the privilege of accompanying anyone of the pilots in the Pacific race. He had made no complaint over the $25 given him by Jensen. Although he is without funds here.

BROCK WORLD PLANE REACHES HARBOR GRACE

Harbor Grace, N. F., Aug. 26 (N.S.)—The "Pride of Detroit," globe encircling Stinson monoplane, arrived here this afternoon from Old Orchard, Me.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—The monoplane "Pride of Detroit" hopped off at 8:58 a. m., Eastern daylight time, today for Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where the start of an attempt at a new world-circling record will be made.

William S. Brock, pilot, drove the monoplane down the beach sands and took off easily. Five minutes later he was reported passing over Cape Elizabeth. Fair weather conditions obtained, with a light northeast wind and some clouds.

At 620 Charles Dyer, lighthouse keeper on Monhegan Island, reported the plane passing low inshore and making good speed as it followed the Maine coast. Monhegan Island lies 13 miles off the mainland.

Five minutes later the ship was over Nathiucus Island in Penobscot Bay. It was reported by coast guardsmen at White Head, near Rockland. The Stinson-Detroiter was apparently making about 100 miles an hour against a light head wind.

At 7:35, Eastern daylight time, the plane passed out of U. S. territory, sighted by West Quoddy Head Coastguard station.

Old Glory's Hop for Rome Delayed by Head Winds

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Head winds for 1200 miles between here and Newfoundland caused another postponement today in the take-off of the monoplane Old Glory on its proposed flight to Rome.

Bonzo, Pet of Lost Flier, Taken to New Family Home

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Reconciled to whatever fate has befallen her son, John "Auggy" Pedlar, one of the missing Honolulu fliers, Mrs. Frank Pedlar Joy, with her husband, left today for Long Beach, Calif., to make their future home. They carried with them Pedlar's pet dog "Bonzo."

The Joys were enroute to the West from Miami, Fla., by automobile when Pedlar, with Miss Mildred Doran and Vilas Knope, hopped off from Oakland, Calif., for Honolulu. They have been with relatives here awaiting news of the flight.

MARILYN AGAIN SEEKS DIVORCE

Paris, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Marilyn Miller, the actress, unable to obtain a hearing for an action of divorce from Jack Pickford, the film actor, in Paris courts has, it was reported today, filed an action in a provincial tribunal.

Marilyn Miller came to Paris about two months ago, where she sought a divorce in the Paris courts, but her action is understood to have been deferred when it became known that the Paris courts had taken exceptions to reported remarks of Miss Miller that divorces were easy to obtain in Paris.

OUSTED CHIEF ASKS HEARING IN PEABODY

Deputy Chief of Police Edward D. Callahan, suspended as acting chief of Peabody by Mayor Robert A. Bakeman of that city for arresting Alfred Baker Lewis, Socialist orator, today demanded a public hearing.

Deputy Callahan amended his demand by stating he asked for it only on condition that Mayor Bakeman ousted under the Civil Service regulations in suspending him. He also declared he would not attempt to collect pay due him until Sept. 11.

The incident gave Mayor Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn, who returned to that city today, an opportunity to state that Mayor Bakeman should have requested a "Red" when he asked for the loan of a Lynn police officer.

"He should have said he wanted a Red officer rather than a law-abiding citizen as Deputy Callahan is," said Mayor Bauer.

YOUTH IN STOLEN CAR NABBED AT GUN POINT

Edward J. Kenniston, 19, of Lexington street, Charlestown, and who admits he is a pal of Jimmie Sheehan, the famous boy night rider of Bunker Hill, was arrested at the point of revolvers today by Traffic Officers Lodge and Griffin and Patrolman McDevitt of the Lagrange street station.

Kenniston and another youth, who escaped, were joy riding in a big limousine taken in Beech street. Unmindful of the fact Washington street is a one-way thoroughfare, they attempted to turn south at Stuart and Washington streets.

Lodge held up his hand for Kenniston to stop. The machine did so and both youths jumped. Kenniston was booked at the Lagrange street station.

Film Actors Buy 128 Acres for Exclusive Homes Colony

Hollywood Hills, Cal., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—A unique exclusively "movie subdivision" has been launched with the purchase of a tract of 128 acres here by a syndicate of film folk headed by Milton Sills.

Associated with him in the purchase of the property, which adjoins the Fatty Arbuckle estate, are Lew Cody, Robert Gilbert, Chester Conklin, Eva La Plante, Anna Gregory, Noah Beery, William Seiter and Jack Mantigue.

The tract will be divided, they announced, and sold only to motion picture people.

WHY CHICKENS CROSS THE ROAD OUT IN ILLINOIS!

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Why does a chicken cross the road? In Marshall County the farmers suggest it may be to avoid being tattooed. Chickens there are to have identifying marks tattooed into the wall of the wing as a check against chicken thefts.

CUT IN MAINE POTATO RATE IS URGED

Washington, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—While rates charged for transporting potatoes from Northern Maine producing territory to consuming centers in the East are generally fair, examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission today recommended railroads be required to have a series of specific reductions to certain places.

The report resulted from a complaint of the Aroostook County Chamber of Commerce, and involved rates to all points in the east and southeast.

After the preliminary study of existing schedules the examiner advised the commission to order reductions to a number of Virginia points and to New Jersey points located on the Lackawanna railroad and the West Jersey & Seashore road, where a rate of 65 cents for 100 pounds applies.

A rate of 60 cents to these points was recommended. To Richmond and Lynchburg, Va., where a rate of 75 cents now applies, a rate of 70 cents was advised while to Roanoke, Va., where the present rate of 84 cents, a rate of 72 cents was recommended.

The controversy will be further heard before the commission before any rate changes are ordered.

ARREST SHERIFF WHO SET FATHER FREE FROM JAIL

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Sheriff Charles E. Hendrix was accused today of aiding his father to escape from jail after discharging the officer who had arrested him on a liquor charge. "Any man who hasn't nerve enough to keep his father out of jail hasn't nerve enough to be sheriff," Hendrix was quoted as saying. The sheriff surrendered to a federal warrant and was released on bond of $5,000.

BLOOD WILL TELL IF BABY IS GYPSY OR KIDNAPED

Oakland, Neb., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—The future of a golden-haired baby girl today hinged on the outcome of a blood test chosen to determine whether the three-year-old child really is a gypsy princess or perhaps the kidnaped daughter of other parents who somewhere are seeking her.

The blood test to decide if the child is of gypsy parentage was decided upon by the authorities after they had taken the girl from a swarthy band whose king and queen claimed her as their own.

The insistent pleading of the gypsy mother, known as Anna John led the authorities to adopt the blood test as their method to prove or disprove her claim. Blood of the gypsy parents and that of the baby will be analyzed and if found related the child will be returned to them as their gypsy princess. Otherwise she will be kept until the rightful parents claim her. Inquiries regarding the child have been received from many parts of the country and several parents are en route here.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—A heavy explosion believed by police to have been caused by a bomb, slightly damaged the pumping station of a city sewage disposal plant here, and alarmed hundreds of people in widely separated sections of the city.

The explosive, which apparently had been placed in a basement window, tore several iron bars from the window grating, shattered windows a few feet away, and dislodged bricks from the wall.

England's Princes, in Miners' Garb, Go Down 2 Miles

Cranbrook, B. C., Aug. 23 (A.P.).—In miners' outfit, with acetylene lights in their caps, the Prince of Wales and Prince George today explored the recesses of the Sullivan mine at Kimberley, two miles underground. For 3,000 yards they rode on an electric line which bores deep into the heart of the mountain.

The princes familiarized themselves with every detail. They then drove through the mining villages to the concentrator.

CHINESE FIRE ON U. S. WARSHIPS

Peking, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—The United States destroyer Noa suffered persistent rifle and machine gun fire from the south bank of the Yangtse River above Chinkiang yesterday and returned the fire. There were no casualties.

This was about the time the gunboat Isabel, flagship of the American Yangtse patrol, was heavily fired on from both banks of the Yangtse at Nanking.

Shanghai, Aug. 26 (I.N.S.).—Three hundred Northern troops are believed to have been drowned or killed by rifle and machine gun fire near Nanking today when Cantonese troops sank two troop laden boats in the Yangtse river.

The Northerners were making an attack against the Cantonese defenders of Nanking.

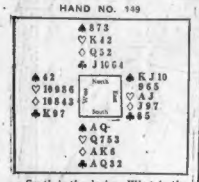
SECOND SECTION

HAND NO. 149



South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In Monday's issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. While the Jack of Hearts is led by Declarer from Dummy. It was with no intention of finessing, but on the possibility that East might cover. Should the finesse be attempted and fail, West would inevitably shift to Diamonds because of his partner's discouraging Spade played to the first trick, and as a result two Diamond tricks would ultimately be lost and game could not be made. Otherwise, by conceding a Heart trick and establishing Clubs while yet in command of all three side suits, game is certain.

Mr. Whitehand will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

STORM WRECKS 29 BOATS

Whalen to Fire Police Drunks

CHELSEA'S MAYOR UP IN ARMS

Issues Drastic Order as He Loses Patience Following Many Complaints

Mayor John J. Whalen of Chelsea has rebelled.

For some time he had been the soul of patience with police officers of his city who got drunk on duty, but there is a limit to all things.

People will talk, and there have been so many complaints that today Mayor Whalen lost his patience and issued an ultimatum that policemen convicted of being drunk on duty hereafter will be incontinently dismissed.

In the last four months six policemen have been suspended for being intoxicated on duty, and numerous additional complaints have been received by the Mayor, including three yesterday.

So he wrote a letter to Lieutenant Henry J. Harrison, acting head of the police department while Chief Charles E. Finn is on vacation, reading as follows:

MAYOR'S STERN WARNING.

"The alarming number of members of the police department who have had charges placed against them for intoxication while on duty during the last few months—such charges resulting in reprimands, punishment duty and suspensions—has not, if current reports are true, remedied that condition or brought forcibly home to the offending officers the seriousness of such conduct.

"Complaints are daily reaching my office to the effect that some members of the department are still violating this rule, and that severe, rigid steps must be taken to prevent the further practice of this serious breach of public trust on the part of police officers, that is and has been vitally affecting the morals of the department.

WILL BAR APPEALS.

"I therefore desire to serve notice on offending members of the police department that immediate discharge will follow when charges of this nature are preferred and substantiated in the future.

"This warning I issue unqualifiedly, and any appeal for executive leniency in such cases in the future will be of no avail."

PUT LOSS IN STORM AT MILLION

Many Gloucester and Fishing Boats Missing Off Nova Scotia; Crops Ruined

At least 29 craft aground, a number of them from Gloucester and Portland, many vessels missing, and thousands of dollars damage on sea and land was the partial report today of the havoc wreaked by Wednesday's storm over Nova Scotia.

Two Gloucester fishermen and one from Portland were among the vessels that were tossed ashore by the gale, and nine fishing schooners from Portland were unreported.

The storm, the worst in 54 years, took treenor a toll in Nova Scotia, some estimates placing the damage to apple and field crops at more than $1,000,000.

50 BRIDGES GONE

At least fifty highway bridges were carried away, miles of trunk highways were under water, and in many places telephone and telegraph wires laid in tangled heaps on the ground.

The Gloucester fishermen which helped to litter the shores of Nova Scotia were the schooners Marion McLean, Capt. William Eastine, which grounded off Canso, and the John A. Cooney, Capt. Christopher Higgins, fast on the rocks off Louisburg.

The Portland schooner wrecked was the Eleanor, Captain Tom Brigham, which surged onto Sand Point at Sherburne, with both anchors gone. The B. G. Purdy, Captain Ed Doughty, also from Portland, managed to make harbor at Liverpool, stripped of her sails.

MANY BOATS MISSING.

Seven Portland schooners unreported were the Bernie and Beale, Barbara, Benjamin Thompson, Daniel Bella, Sunapee, New Dawn and Lachinvar.

Capt. John Carranbo of the schooner Herbert Parker from Gloucester, sent word that his craft had arrived at Canso with foremast broken off close to the deck, and with jumbo and foresails carried away.

Other Gloucester fishermen reporting damage were the schooner Marian Curtis, foresail gone; schooner Stiletto, foresail torn and rigging pulled from mastic, schooner Mary M., deck swept clear of everything including four dories, a number of buoys and swordfish gear.

WALKER A 'HIT' WITH FLAPPERS

Berlin, Aug. 26 (I. N. S.).—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York city, made a tremendous hit with the German flappers when the newspapers today published an account of his performance at the piano during the American Club's dinner in his honor.

He played a song of his own composition: "Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May?"

A flood of letters reached his hotel from flappers addressed to "Dear Jimmy" and asking him to compose a song hit for Berlin.

"I wonder how The Sidewalks of Berlin' would go?" remarked a friend.

"Try enough of this German beer and you will know," replied Mayor Walker.

COL. GLIDDEN IS WEAKENING

Colonel Charles J. Glidden, telephone and automobile pioneer, who is critically ill at his home, No. 40 Fenway, is very much weaker today, a member of the family stated.

He has been confined to his bed since August 1, and has been waging a hard but losing battle for life. Colonel Glidden is sixty-nine years old, and retired about twenty years ago as head of the Bell Telephone Company of New England.

RICH YOUTH AND BEAUTY WED DESPITE OBSTACLES

New York, Aug. 26 (A.P.).—After sundry obstacles, Le Roy Chadbourne, wealthy lawyer's adopted son, and his bride, the former Olivia Sherner, one of the most beautiful girls in society, are on their honeymoon. The wedding was postponed last May because of her illness, and the ceremony yesterday was an hour late because the bridegroom forgot the license. He had to chase 73 blocks in a taxi for it.

ARKANSAS MOB HANGS YOUTH IN GIRL ATTACK

Pinebluff, Ark., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—The Daily Graphic says that a young negro was taken from sheriff John Riley of Ashley County, near Wilmot, Ark., and hanged to a tree for an attempted attack on a young woman.

YOUTHS UNDER 25 BLAMED FOR MOST BIG CRIMES

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 26 (I.N.S.).—Youths under the age of 25 commit most of the "big crimes" in New York State, according to the subcommittee of statistics of the State Crime Commission.

The "medium age" for those who commit robberies, "perhaps the most serious of the so-called professional crimes," is given as not over 23, while for those who commit burglary it is fractionally lower. The median age for forgery and fraud is about 30, and for grand larceny somewhere between 25 and 30.

Another portion of the report states that only 15.42 per cent. of persons arrested for felony in New York City are punished.

"If we start with 100 per cent. or arrests," the report says "38.03 per cent. are left after the police custody has been terminated, 41.12 per cent. are left after the preliminary hearing, 28.18 per cent. after the Grand Jury has acted, 20.57 per cent. after trial and 15.42 per cent are actually imprisoned or fined."

Story of a Girl Who Did Just What She Chose and Then Took Flight

Emily Duane is about to marry Rodney Sayre, conservative, and scion of an old New England family. Emily, parentless, is extremely wealthy, charming, high-spirited and impulsive. Hindu mysticism is her fad. She wills a large sum to Swami Lal Singh, her teacher.

Two days before the wedding Emily decides to have a rehearsal of the ceremony. Burton Lamb, best-man-to-be; Betty Bailey and Nell Harding, bridesmaids; Polly Pennington, matron of honor, and her husband, Jim; Pete Gibby, Betty Bailey's beau; Emily, Rodney and Emily's Aunt Judy are talking things over, and among the subjects is Emily's bequest. The will she announces is cancelled when she becomes Rodney's wife. The Swami overhears and is incensed.

Emily then gets a message that Mrs. Kitty Laurence, a dear friend, has become a mother, and she drops everything to go to the hospital. It develops that Polly Pennington has left with Emily. Jim Pennington waits for his wife, but gets nervous after a while and phone the hospital.

Neither Emily nor Polly has been there——

Police are called in to investigate the mystery and they find Polly Pennington at the bottom of a ravine nearby—dead.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE two said no more, for as Aunt Judy had prognosticated, callers came in streams.

Also came the Swami.

Nell appropriated him, Betty making no objection, and Pete Gibby joined the pair, for he had a distinct distrust of his Hindusship, and much desired to watch him.

"Give us your ideas and advice, won't you, Lal Singh?" Pete said, pleasantly. "What do you think became of Miss Duane?"

"I think it is a freakish prank, to annoy and tease her lover, the good Mr. Sayre."

"Oh, you do. Going pretty far in a prankish line to disappear just before her wedding day?"

"Yes, yes, but Miss Duane went far, always. She was the far-going sort."

"Don't say was, it annoys me. Yes, she is of the far-going sort."

Nell was distinctly upset at Pete's questions, and indeed, at his being there at all, as she wanted the Hindu to herself.

"Let us alone, Pete," she said, crossly. "The Swami wants to talk to me."

"How do you know he does? I haven't heard him say so. Well, I'll clear out as soon as he answers my question."

Now, the Swami didn't at all like this gay young man, whose off-hand manner and smiling eyes seemed ever mocking him.

So, he decided to give him a jab though he didn't know that expression at all.

"You perhaps know little of the young lady's gay ways?"

"I know all about her gay ways, and consider them delightful." Pete was getting very angry, but succeeded to keep calm.

"I think not, sir," purred the soft Oriental voice, and the great dark eyes looked straight at him. "You know, then, of the escapades at Atlantic City?"

"Certainly," declared Pete, who hadn't the slightest idea of them.

"Ah—then I say no more."

And it was not necessary, for with a slight gesture of his long brown

Honk! Honk! Judge Rules Auto Is Bold, Bad "Bootleg"!

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—Decision on a case in Federal Court here titled "the United States of America vs. One Ford," has endowed the automobile with a personality and established a new legal precedent in the court warfare against liquor violations.

Federal Judge Woodrough in his ruling decided that an automobile used for unlawful concealment or conveyance of liquor is equally guilty with an individual and is punishable by confiscation.

BULLETS FLY AS CONSTABLES RUSH AUTO

Many pedestrians barely missed injury as Tremont and Church streets this afternoon when, the police claim, one of two constables who had been defeated in an attempt to seize an automobile, fired several shots from a revolver.

The shots whizzed over the heads of women and children and struck against the brick walls of nearby buildings.

The section was in an uproar and police rushed toward the scene of the shooting.

The trouble started when the constables rushed up to an automobile parked at the corner of Tremont and Church streets. Two young men and husky were seated inside. The two constables showed badges and stated that they were going to take the machine.

The two men climbed out and a rough and tumble fight followed. When the battle was over the two constables were lying on the sidewalk. One sat up and drawing a revolver began firing in all directions. Women and children screamed and fled.

The two young men climbed into the automobile and drove away. The constables also disappeared. The police began a hunt for them and so far have been unsuccessful.

WISH TO WED AN OLD-TIMEY GIRL JAILS FORGER

New York, Aug. 26 (I.N.S.).—A decision to marry an old-fashioned girl and settle down may send Sidney Fincus, 26, well known as a spender in Broadway night clubs, to jail for the rest of his life.

While calling last night on the girl who had influenced him to end a 25-year career of forgery, he was arrested by detectives who had been hunting him in five cities. Today as a fourth offender he was facing a life sentence under the Baumes law.

Since a Broadway department store complained Fincus had issued a worthless $700 check, police have been trying to find him in Rochester, Atlantic City and Detroit.

A week ago, detectives learned Fincus had been in Monticello, N. Y., driving a sporty automobile. They obtained the license number. The car was discovered here. Fincus was jailed on charges of grand larceny, forgery and of being a fugitive from justice.

Despite his plight, the "gentleman forger," as the police call him, refused to reveal the girl's name.

Police say his record shows imprisonment in San Quentin, Sing Sing and Elmira. While serving a five-year sentence in San Quentin, he was left $30,000 by an uncle in New York. A year after his release the $30,000 was spent.

In September, 1918, Fincus confessed in St. Louis he had perpetrated many forgeries.

Chaliapin May Appear in Spanish Story Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Aug. 26.

CHALIAPIN in the movies! That's a good headline, Chaliapin, one of the greatest opera singers in the world, is now negotiating with David Wark Griffith for a part in the next Griffith picture, "A Romance of Old Spain," which is founded on a very old Spanish story.

David Wark Griffith is never without ideas and when the thought came to him that Chaliapin was just the person for the part, he cabled to Biarritz, where the singer is vacationing. Chaliapin is now trying to arrange his engagements so that he can return to America and come to Hollywood.

Fortunately, the picture is being filmed before the operatic season begins.

It takes more than a sick director to worry Mack Sennett. He has had too many years handling the old megaphone himself, so, when he heard that Alf Goulding was sick, instead of postponing the picture, he said:

"Bring on the actors."

It is eight long years since Mr. Sennett directed a comedy. His last was "Mickey," with Mabel Normand. But "The Romance of a Bathing Beauty" is his story, his idea and really based on his experiences with the girls who were the original Sennett bathing girls.

So who is better fitted to direct this comedy than Mack Sennett? It better be a good picture, too.

France is trying to borrow Renee Adoree from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play "Joan of Arc" in the great national film to be produced under the supervision of the French government.

By a simple twist of the wrist, presto, change, J. Farrell McDonald becomes an Irish comedian. It all started when he played Jiggs in "Bringing Up Father." Universal, desperate and in need of someone to play Kelly in "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris," reckoned if Mr. McDonald were good enough for Jiggs, he should be good enough for Kelly.

There you have it.

The scarcity of leading ladies is no longer a joke at Paramount Famous Players. Four pictures are held up waiting for the right girl. There is the Fields-Conklin comedy, Richard Dix's next opera, Adolphe Menjou's film and George Fitzmaurice's "Victory," and nary a leading lady for any of them.

Milton Sills inadvertently furnished a honeymoon for Arthur Stone and his bride, Dorothy Wesemore. Arthur is a First National comedian, and he was married just the day before the Sills company left for Scotia, in orthern California, to begin work on "The Valley of the Giants."

"Gee, I have to leave my bride," so said the bridegroom.

Suggested Sills: "Bring her along."

No more said than done.

BLOOD FLOW TO SAVE ACTOR IN 5-STORY FALL

New York, Aug. 26 (I.N.S.).—Following a blood transfusion at Bellevue Hospital, Clark Twelvetrees, twenty-three, an actor, son of C. Twelvetrees, noted illustrator, was expected to recover from injuries sustained when he fell or leaped from a fifth floor window at a hotel.

His wife, Helen, nineteen, a professional dancer, offered her blood when physicians found Twelvetrees had suffered an internal hemorrhage, but it was not suitable, and that of a professional donor was taken.

Twelvetrees struck the hotel canopy and then the front mudguard of an automobile at the curb, breaking his fall.

The crash could be heard for some distance, and scores of persons ran to join the few who had seen the man fall. To their amazement, the victim picked himself up and staggered back to the hotel, where he collapsed in his wife's arms.

As soon as he had recovered consciousness at the hospital, he demanded to be discharged, saying he was feeling fine. The hospital authorities persuaded him to remain, however.

Twelvetrees said he had fallen from the window during a party. "It was all a mistake," he said.

TRIBUTES PAID TO HEFFERNAN

At a special meeting of the City Council today tributes were paid to the memory of its late president, John J. Heffernan, who died yesterday, by Councillors Frederic E. Dowling, who succeeds to the office, and Charles G. Keene, who was president before Mr. Heffernan.

A resolution were also passed on his death as being a loss to the city and State "of a public servant of the highest type," and the closing of a career marked "by unselfish devotion to the best interests of the city and State."

The council voted to attend the funeral tomorrow in a body and that Mrs. Heffernan be given the remainder of her late husband's salary for the year.

STATE POLICE TRAFFIC SQUAD STARTS PATROL

The new traffic division of the State police, numbering 49 men, today started patrolling the highways of the State. Of the 49, twenty-seven are rookies who recently graduated from training school.

The division is in charge of Lieutenant Harold R. Williams. Each sub-station will have two men whose time will be devoted to traffic work. Formerly this duty was part of the many activities that the uniformed branch of the State police was called upon to perform.

DIVORCES RICH ARCHITECT WRIGHT; WILL GET $36,000

Madison, Wis., Aug. 26 (A.P.).—A judgment of divorce has been granted to Miriam Noel Wright, estranged wife of Frank Lloyd Wright, famous architect, by Judge A. C. Hoppman in Circuit Court here.

Granting of the uncontested divorce is interpreted as meaning the marital difficulties of the Wrights have ended with the settlement reported to amount to $36,000 paid, or to be paid, by Wright to his former wife.

WEATHER BUREAU IS ATTACKED BY "PROPHET"

Washington, Aug. 26 (A.P.).—Charges that the Weather Bureau has been issuing "incorrect and misleading" reports covering the effect of weather on crops, and has sought to create the erroneous impression that this year has not been "abnormal," were made today by Herbert Janvrin Browne, a long-range forecaster, of Washington. He expressed his views in a letter to Secretary Jardine, who has jurisdiction over the Weather Bureau.

How to cross a BRIDGE PARTNER -and get away with it

In some states, particularly the state of matrimony, trumping a partner's ace is a crime more to be feared than shooting a Ford out of season.

Pretzeleers have found a way out. They make sure there's always a big plate of O-So-Guds alongside the card table. Then when the injured partner gets fairly incandescent with blistering rage, the pretzeleer bites out a few letters like this:

Now, who could continue to talk mean after getting such a sweetly contrite answer? Not your other half, surely.

Crispy, crunchy, salty pretzels baked by Uneeda Bakers smooth over many difficulties. They help make things pleasant at parties and picnics. They're good any time with iced drinks. They're fine for between-meals and before-we-go-to-bed lunches.

And try them with soup, with salad, with cheese, with dessert. Give them to the children for piecing. They are very easy to digest.

Be sure to ask for Uneeda Bakers' pretzels.

French Beat Japs in Davis Cup Doubles

By FRED C. LANE.

Longwood, Aug. 26.—France won the right to play America for the Davis Cup at Forest Hills, Sept. 3, as a result of their victory over the Japanese doubles team today. The French players won today's double match by the score of 9—7, 6—1.

Captain Gilleo of the French team made a last minute shift in the French team. Henri Cochet, who conquered Ohta the Japanese champion, was substituted for Jene Borotra as a teammate for Jacques Brugnon.

The Japanese team opened play, breaking through Brugnon's service due to superb playing by Harada. They held this advantage by brilliant baseline play which was sprinkled with many interesting volleys at the net. "A break of Today" service in the eighth game put the French team on even terms with four games all.

This game went to deuce three times.

Cochet won his service in the ninth game and France went into the lead for the first time. Harada's service was a bit too severe to handle and he won his service losing but one point.

First Set.

Cochet-Brugnon:	1	2	4	1	5	7	4	10	7	9—9
Toba-Harada:	4	6	2	4	3	5	1	4	4	1	2	4	7—7

France won the second set when the Tri-Colored team broke through Toba's service in the fourth game and Haradas in the sixth to win 6—1.

Second Set.

Brugnon-Cochet:	4	1	4	4	4	4	6	4	5	6—9
Toba-Harada:	1	4	1	0	1	1	2	1	0	1—6

MALONEY RISKO'S TARGET

Artistic Lacing Johnny Gave Gagnon Puts Him In Line for Bout With Jim

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, today opened fire on Jim Maloney as a result of his victory in his tea-round bout with Jack Gagnon at the Argonne A. A.'s show at Braves Field.

Risko and Maloney were matched to battle at Cleveland last Winter, but on that occasion Maloney withdrew from the contest so that he could tackle Jack Delaney in New York.

Risko's terrific body punches brought about the defeat of Gagnon. The latter took a terrific pounding, but was in there fighting all the bell.

In the past, Gagnon has been accused of lacking a true fighting heart. I think the Frenchman's showing against Risko should prove that this charge was false.

Jack Conway

Three times Gagnon was knocked down by Risko's mighty blows and three times he got up fighting.

Risko scored his first knockdown in the fourth round when he dropped Gagnon with a left hook to the body. The Frenchman hopped to his feet before Referee Johnny Brasell could start to count.

In the eighth frame Risko dropped Gagnon for a count of seven. On this occasion, another left hook to the body did the damage.

The third knockdown was scored by Risko in the tenth frame, when a left hook to the chin tipped Gagnon over. The Frenchman came up counting at the count of two. He was groggy, but he kept punches flying and Risko was unable to put over the finishing sock.

ARTHUR SULLIVAN of Weymouth was awarded the decision over Tommy Clayton of the West End in a six-round mill.

Jimmy Barrett of Cambridge outscored Dave Flash of Fall River in six sessions.

Pete Starmarti of Nashua, N. H., stopped Jack Sullivan of Seattle in three frames.

Manuel Canto of the West End won over Freddy Kiers of Fall River in four rounds.

Jimmy Picardi of East Boston defeated Fred Lambert of Portland in four chapters.

In the semi-final Al Friedman of Roslindale won the decision over Cycle DeRosiers of Nashua, N. H., in an uninteresting ten-rounder, while Terry Minnie of Quincy was awarded a draw over Jerry Theroux of Nashua, N. H., in a six rounder.

TUNNEY IS FAST ROUNDING INTO SHAPE

Speculator, N. Y., Aug. 26 (A.P.)—More than 1,000 persons who watched Gene Tunney box six rounds with his sparring partners have come to the conclusion that the Tunney who dethroned Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia last year couldn't have been in better physical condition than he is today.

Tunney yesterday traveled six fast rounds, three each against Harry Wolcott and Frank Mantell, and ended up by breathing effortlessly, although he got a stiff workout from each man.

While Gene the champion just the kind of workout he desired. Billy kept coming in to Gene, threatening steadily, poked his left to the face to prevent his opponent from setting himself by moving his head just the fraction of an inch. Tunney often evaded Wolcott's left hook, then retaliated with a barrage of body blows.

Against Mantell the champion tried out his attack, employing his left most of the time. Once when Mantell tore in he was met with a vicious right cross that sent him toppling. Gene used his entire punching repertoire, but shot up percuts and hooks at close range stood out clearly.

DEMPSEY BACK TO OLD STYLE OF BOXING

Chicago, Aug. 26 (A.P.)—Jack Dempsey has been ordered back to the bobbing, weaving attack which carried him to victory through many heavyweight battles, with the flat-footed stance from which the deadly hooks are launched.

Manager Leo P. Flynn coached Jack through three sparring sessions yesterday on toiling his head from left-hand leads, and it was especially noticeable that Jack worked flat-footed most of the time. He got up on his toes while sparring mates, but when the devastating punch was to be launched Jack settled back on his heels for the punch.

The daily program Flynn said will depend upon Jack's appetites for work after he has finished his long jaunt of three to five miles. He did five miles up hill and down yesterday and after late breakfast went out for another walk. This determined Flynn on giving the former champion a session with the gloves, and the same situation will control Jack's early boxing work until late next week, when heavy work begins.

TOM GOODWIN

Suffolk A. A., Room 205 309 Washington St., Tel. HUB. 7066

FINNEGAN WILL DONATE TITLE TO VICTOR

The biggest volley of boxing gloves thrown in this city in many a week will mark the reopening of the Arena on Monday night, when the Suffolk A. A. opens its doors for the Fall season.

Staging 50 rounds for 50 cents, Goodwin has exercised his match-making genius by selecting the outstanding and most popular boxers in the part of New England to compete in a ten-rounder, a pair of eights and a pair of six-rounders.

Goodwin has the drawing cards, and he is depending on them to pack the Arena until the walls bulge next Monday night.

Sammy Fuller, whom the North End sees as the next featherweight champion of the world, and Johnny Kilgore, the Woburn Wildcat who gave Fuller a very close argument a few months back, are to mingle in the feature bout, and Dick Honeyboy Finnegan will donate his belt, emblematic of the New England featherweight championship to the winner.

Chick Suggs, the colored featherweight from New Bedford, is anxious to get into the thick of the featherweight fight once more, and yesterday Dave Lowansky arrived him at his summer camp in Wales to start training, for there is a possibility that the flashy Suggs will meet the winner.

Joe Monte of Brockton, another local card, and Jimmy Madden, his foe from Roxbury, are to appear in the eight-round semi-final, while Roy Mitchell of Halifax is expected to draw hundreds of Canadians and Nova Scotians to the Arena to watch him battle the well-known Tex McEwan of Philadelphia.

Goodwin is delighted with the six rounders and four-rounders which he is offering, and he tells his friends that he believes it is the best "undercard card" that was ever offered in this city. Jackie Donohue, New York's sensational young featherweight, and Al Delmont of the North End should provide plenty of action in one six rounder, while in the other Eating Sandrelli and Young Moore of the North end will renew a rivalry which has been counted through the streets of the North End for weeks.

The four rounders, usually "fillers," have the famous young Jew Jack Donohue, former Boston College athlete and now embarking on a career as a boxer, in a bout with Eddie Johnson of Quincy; Danny Seitz, hard-hitting East Boston lightweight, and Johnny Rosen, Rosa, the amateur who battled Joe Monte and half a hundred more without any more fisticuffs and Andre Eagle, said to be a promising heavyweight, in a bout with Irish Dan Cronin of Cambridge.

ENTRIES FLOCKING INTO HULL AMATEUR BOUTS

Many entries have already been received for the Hull A. A. open amateur boxing show, which will be held Tuesday night, August 30, at Surfside Ballroom, Nantasket.

There will be boxing in the 113, 126, 135, 147 and 160-pound classes. Entries for this tournament will close with Daniel Short, Hull Post Office.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

Without smoothness at the start of the back swing, which can be accomplished, usually, by making it a point to see the clubhead start away, it will hardly be possible to maintain smoothness of action throughout the swing. A quick start results in jerkiness at the top and to exercise too much wrist action in the back swing. When the club goes back rapidly the clubhead moves so very rapidly that the wrists seeking to keep pace with it, break back quickly, whereas the back swing should be almost wholly a backward sweep of the left arm. The turning of the clubhead over the top takes up a little slack in the wrists, and there you are—ready to swing smoothly forward. The player who has a correct mental picture of this will do it better than if he tries to accomplish it actually by thinking of it while doing it.

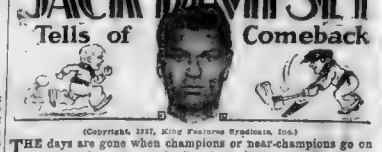
JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback



(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THE days are gone when champions go on barnstorming tours and offer from $250 to $1,000 to any of the "all-comers" who can stand up with them for four rounds.

It's just about as well—for the poor "come-ons" who would climb into the ring and make the try for the cash. For it always was about 100 to 1 against them.

I was about the last of the crowd of the other days to make such a tour for publicity purposes. I made one in 1918 after I beat Fred Fulton, and the old ballyhoo was on for a fight for me against Jess Willard.

But nowadays a fighter who climbs near to the heights—or who wins the title—doesn't need any tour to keep his name and his picture before the public.

BUT that isn't the same story that goes for the old timers. They had to meet some tough birds in their touring lifetimes, for a purse offer of $250 or $400 was a lot of money and some of the really good men would make a try for it.

John L. Sullivan was probably the originator of the idea. No one kept count as to how many men he knocked out in such exhibition bouts. But I imagine the total hit 100—or more. Most of them were easy for John L., but occasionally there was an exception.

Sullivan had spent the afternoon with some "good fellows" and wasn't in real shape to spar with anybody that night. But he refused to listen to his handlers and went into action against a tough youngster who was seeking the $250 that John L. offered to anyone who could stand up with him for four rounds.

The youngster opened up by peppering John L. with drives to the chin and body. Sullivan, a bit wobbly on his legs, was unable to step out of the kid's way and also unable to balance himself for counter punching.

Things went from bad to worse for John L., and his handlers came to the realization that if something wasn't done to help him he was liable to fall from exhaustion.

ONE of them got a brick and, standing in the wings of the stage, held it in such position as to give off the idea that he was going to throw it at the kid. When the youngster saw the menace of the brick, he stepped punching Sullivan and ducked. Each time he started to tap John some brave the brick holder made a move to throw the brick at him.

Fear of the brick took all the fighting enthusiasm out of the boy. He stopped his attack. Finally John L., taking advantage of an opening, left when the boy was taking a quick look to see what the brick holder was doing, hit the boy on the chin.

The kid went down. Those who saw the affair, insist that the punch wasn't a really staggering blow, but anyway, that boy never got up. The brick had whipped him at a time when he might have flunked his way to a world's championship.

Carrier Pigeons True Knights of the Air

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON picked up a box which was addressed to the Sporting Editor. It was from I. W. Hoyt, Berwick, Maine. The veteran opened it and found that it contained a dead carrier pigeon which had been shot. There was an identification band on one of the pigeon's legs which read "Hub 8711 A. J. 27." There was another band which read "C. O. 54."

"I imagine that Mr. Hoyt found the pigeon after it was shot and that he is anxious to protest against this kind of so-called sport," said Mr. Boston soberly. "It is a crying shame that a bird as courageous and as intelligent should be killed by some senseless sportsman.

"My friend, S. B. Gibson of the Hub Carrier Pigeon Club, tells me that each year 10,000 racing bands are handed out to members of the organization who have carrier pigeons. He informs me that many carrier pigeons have pedigrees much like the thoroughbreds of the race turf.

"A brave lot are these carrier pigeons. During the past few years, owners of the birds have matched them in frequent races. I presume the bird that was shot down in Maine was engaged in one of these races, that it was carried off its course by the air currents and that it fell into a hunter's trap.

Mr. Boston

"It is a common thing for a carrier pigeon to lose his way during a race. It is obliged to fight against the elements and they are often too much for it.

"I have known of carrier pigeons being obliged to make forced landings much like aviators when in distress. Sometimes other birds folk races for the birds until their regain their strength. The pigeons are then released and they resume their flights. But they always reach home.

"HECTOR McINNIS of South Boston at one time owned a flock of carrier pigeons.

"My birds always reached home,' Hector once told me. 'Some of my friends doubted this on one occasion and so I released my star carrier pigeon at Worcester to prove my assertion.

"The pigeon failed to snow up that night. All the following day, I watched for him, but he didn't come winging home. Naturally my friends gave me the laugh.

"On the third day the pigeon also failed to come bobbing home, but I still had faith in him.

"My friends gathered around on the fourth day to have a little amusement at my expense.

"I told them that my pigeon would come home sometime, somehow. I went to the front door of my house with my friends behind me. I looked down at the open gate of my yard. And lo and behold my carrier pigeon walked right in on us. His feet were raw and bleeding as it is quite a walk from Worcester to Boston for even a carrier pigeon. But he came home.'

"I won't try and beat that one"

GREAT DAY IS PLANNED FOR FRANK HOGAN

Thousands of admirers of Ex-Frank Hogan, Somerville politician and former Boston Braves ball player, are expected to gather at the Wigwam Saturday afternoon when a testimonial will be tendered the popular Democrat by the Somerville Democratic City Committee.

Hogan, who was graduated from Holy Cross College in 1913, played baseball with the Braves for several years. He was a member of the team that won the world's championship in 1914. It was while playing baseball that Hogan received the injuries which resulted in the loss of his left leg. He was forced to retire from baseball after the accident, but, undaunted, he began preparing himself for a career in politics. He studied law and was admitted to the bar. He was elected to the Somerville City Council and served as president of the council. He was elected to the State Senate in 1916 and served for two years. He was defeated for re-election in 1918 by Alderman Robert W. Hogan.

Hogan is chairman of the Democratic City Committee and is also treasurer and financial secretary.

The following are members of the active committee: James Doyle, John Barrett, Thomas Bennett, Edward Colton, Dennis Donovan, Jr., Truman Ambrose Dwight, Hugh Duffy, Lawrence Feley, Dan Hanifen, Leo Hathan, John Hogan, Joseph Kalgren, Chester Martin, Hubert McClellan, Frank McKay, Frederick McGovern, Frances McGonigle, William McGrath, William Mullin, Arthur Murphy, John Murray, Joseph Regan, John Sheehan, Leonard Spinney, John St. Angelo, Richard Sullivan and Lawrence Murphy.

Says Dempsey Will Knockout Tunney

(This is the concluding article of a series on the comeback of Jack Dempsey, written exclusively for Universal Service by Leo P. Flynn, the noted boxing man to whom Dempsey gave much of the credit for his success.)

By LEO P. FLYNN,
Manager of Jack Dempsey.

New York, Aug. 26.—I have now reached that part of my story where I am about to have the laugh on the can't-be-doners.

I was told that Dempsey was "through," that he could never be put in condition for a real fight. I thought otherwise and proved it.

I was told that even if he achieved [illegible] ball so many things to worry him [illegible] could not concentrate on the fight.

I retired him in the fourth round against Tunney with his right [illegible] and I will [illegible] Dempsey finished with me.

Tunney can't knock out Dan O'Dowd and Tom Gibbons hasn't been able to [illegible] years. He went [illegible] Jimmy Ellis a few months ago and [illegible] Dempsey would step in two rounds.

I don't consider Tunney, even [illegible] for beating Harry Greb. He had Greb a minor [illegible] good natured [illegible] Tunney, but he couldn't beat Greb.

The Dempsey who will enter the ring on Sept. 22 will be a stranger to Tunney. Tunney has never [illegible] Dempsey before.

The Dempsey who will fight Tunney this time is 50 per cent. better than the Dempsey who fought him last time. Every bit of poison is out of his system. He is speedier and stronger. He has no mental troubles.

By the way, don't be surprised if Dempsey enters the ring weighing 200 pounds. He only weighed 194 for Sharkey, and he has never weighed more than that for any of his fights.

In closing, I would like to point out the significant experience of Jack Renault, who is a good heavyweight. Renault retired from the game for a year and then made a comeback against Romero Rojas, a man he once knocked out in one round. Rojas won the decision.

Tunney has had a long lay! Dempsey has a fight under his belt a tough fight, one that is bound to give him a lot of confidence.

The old champion will be the new champion on September 22.

That's my story, and I'm stuck on it.

(END)

WILL REGAIN TITLE.

A family problem

IN every family there's one or more of these top-milk thieves. They love coffee. And naturally they want coffee at its best. So the rich "top of the bottle" goes into their morning cup.

Nice for the coffee drinkers—but not so good for the milk-drinking children of the family. Milk robbed of its top is pale, thin, poor milk—deprived of richness that growing bodies need. Children should drink whole milk.

But you can solve this family problem easily—in the same delicious way that millions of other coffee drinkers have solved it. Spare the top of the bottle—but cream-and-sugar your morning cup to smooth, golden, mellow perfection with Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk!

This is a blend of pure, fresh, full-cream country milk and finest sugar. Super-rich—because most of the water has been removed. Super-smooth—because the sugar is blended in by a method you can't equal at home. And super-economical—because it costs only one-half as much as sugar and cream used separately—and it will keep for days after the can is opened—even without ice!

Use Standard for cooking, too. It gives extra richness, smoothness and creaminess to any dish that requires both milk and sugar.

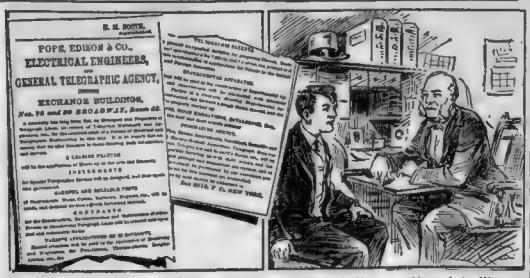
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

About three days later, Edison was in the Law Gold Indicator Company office when their "gold-reporting telegraph" went awry. All was confusion until Edison quietly volunteered his services and quickly found that a broken spring had fallen between two wheels. As a reward for his timely help he was made manager.

On September 24th, 1869, the great Wall Street panic (known as "Black Friday") was precipitated by Jay Gould and "Jim" Fisk. Edison was viewing the frenzied throngs in the street when one of his operators walked over, extended his hand and said, "Shake, Edison, we're O. K. We haven't a cent to lose."



Edison has the distinction of being first in so many things that it is not strange that he, in partnership with a young telegraph engineer with the Gold Indicator Company, named Francis L. Pope, should have run the first advertisement by a firm of electrical engineers. The advertisement is reproduced above.

Marshall Lefferts, president of the Western Union, engaged Edison to improve the stock-ticker. Edison produced his Universal Printer, which he thought was worth $5,000. He would have taken $3,000. When Lefferts asked him if he would take $40,000 he reports that he came near fainting.

Household Hints

Grease stains on a stove should be wiped off immediately with newspaper. Before cleaning the stove, rub the stain with a cloth dipped in turpentine.

New kid gloves are not likely to split when first put on if they are placed between the folds of a damp towel for an hour or two before they are required. The dampness softens the gloves and allows them to stretch more readily.

After using a scrubbing brush rinse well and turn it on its side to dry. The brush will wear better if the bristles are not always wet, and if they are not allowed to get soaked with water they will not bend so much when in use.

If you have carpet in the passageway place a sheet of brown paper of appropriate size under the doormat. The dust collected in the mat will then collect on the paper instead of settling into the carpet.

Relishes Will Add Zest to Meals

By MARTHA LEE

HAVE you ever spent hours and hours preparing a fine, costly dinner, only to find that the consumption of it proved somehow flat and uninteresting? Perhaps you forgot your relish dish!

A good relish will add zest to the most ordinary meal. So today I'm going to give you some more pickle recipes, for the good housewife can never have too many.

Green Tomato Relish—Four quarts green tomatoes, two quarts cabbage, eight large onions, three small red peppers, six green peppers, one small bunch of celery, three pounds of brown sugar, one-half cup salt, one ounce celery seed, two quarts vinegar. Chop all whole ingredients fine, add the balance, and cook for one-half hour, after bringing to the boil. Pack in jars and seal.

Uncooked Chutney—This is called English Chutney Sauce. Chop a dozen large ripe peeled tomatoes, sprinkle a fourth of a cup of salt over them and let stand for a couple of hours, and then put in a bag to drain over night. In the morning put through the food chopper three-fourths pound of seeded raisins, one pound of tart apples, two fresh red peppers, six small onions, and mix well with the tomato, adding also half a cup of fresh mint leaves minced finely. Then add an ounce of white mustard seed, two cups of granulated or brown sugar and three pints of vinegar that has been brought to the boiling point and then cooled.

Mix all ingredients well, put into a crock and stir every day for ten days. Then place in jars and seal. This will not require cooking, but must be stored in a dry, cool place.

Uncooked Tomato Relish—Four quarts tomatoes (ripe but firm), half cup chopped celery, two small onions, two green bell peppers, half cup granulated sugar, half teaspoon white mustard seed, one cup vinegar. Cook tomatoes and add salt. Put in bag to drain over night. Chop onions, pepper and celery. Add and sprinkle. This is a good rule also for plain mixed pickles.

Mustard Pickles—Cut into pieces a cauliflower, a dozen cucumbers, a quart of small green tomatoes, a pint of small onions and a quart of tender string beans. These proportions can be varied at convenience. Cover with dry salt and let stand overnight. Drain the pickles and cover with a mixture made as follows: Mix two ounces turmeric powder, two ounces dry mustard, one-half ounce ground allspice, one-half ounce ground cloves, one-half ounce pepper, teaspoon of salt.

Moisten these with a little vinegar and work into a smooth paste, heating the remainder of the gallon to the boiling point. Stir the mixed spices, boil and pour over the vegetables which were packed in the jars after draining off the brine.

Faithfuly yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Getting Control of Yourself

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D
Former President of the American Medical Association

IF you would get control of the machine you call yourself you get a few notions out of your head. The first of these notions, if like many people, you ever had it or still retain it, is that you are composed of two separate and distinct parts, one called mind and the other called body.

Alexander, by his own studies of himself, came to know that the mind is a function, the supreme function of the body. This is as much as to say that manifestation of power is the supreme function of the motor engine. Therefore, argued Alexander, if one part seems to be defective the defect is probably one of the whole mechanism and not of the part alone. As an illustration, flatfoot is not a defect of the foot alone, to be remedied by treatment to the foot. It is the result of a defect in the use of the mechanism which controls the carriage of the whole body and to rectify this faulty use of the whole body may cure the flat foot.

Now, disease and faulty function are inseparable. In most diseases the fault in the function comes first. Much disease, not all, can be prevented consciously preventing faults in function and much, not all, can be cured by consciously restoring correct function.

You grasp the significance of these observations when you remember that the difference between man and the lower animals is that instinct is the important guide to the conduct of animals and reason plays a comparatively small part, in man's conduct. Instinct plays a smaller while reason plays, should play, may play, a greater part. Instinct is the result of accumulated racial experience. Man has taken perhaps a million years to leave the tree and reach his present state of civilization. By far the largest part of that time, perhaps more than nine hundred and ninety thousand years, he has spent in a state of savagery or pre-civilization. He has only been at all civilized for the remaining thousand. Instinct, therefore, is more than nine hundred and ninety thousand parts due to the experience of the savage, less than ten thousand parts due to the experience of civilization, and only in the very slightest degree due to the experiences of present-day civilization.

Instinct can therefore only be a sound guide to our present conduct if and in so far as our experiences are similar to those of our ancestors. But our experiences derived from an environment of civilization are not similar. Our ancestors gained their experience in a highly stable environment. Our environment is not only a changing one, but changes more rapidly every day. Therefore instinct has become an unsound guide to conduct and becomes more and more unsound every day.

Author of "THE TAXI DANCER"

A Story of Sylvia Bryant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd, a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd persuades Ackerman to install Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, in her home as her social secretary. Ackerman admires Sylvia's beauty and charm, and Stuart Gifford, his cousin, falls in love with her. He makes light of marriage and she refuses to let him kiss her. Mrs. Ackerman confesses to Sylvia that she hoped her presence would aid in keeping her husband away from Margot. Sylvia overhears Margot's divorced husband threaten to kill Ackerman who defies him and says he is going out with Margot that very night. To avert a tragedy Sylvia begs him to take her to dinner. She tells Mrs. Ackerman what she is doing. Ackerman takes her to a revue.

Afterward Ackerman is stabbed to death. Sylvia flees and appeals to Gifford for help.

CHAPTER 29

STUART GIFFORD, with a hasty nervousness, left Sylvia outside the restaurant. She watched him go, hollowly; he had been as a ghost, a mere shadow of the ardent suitor she thought she had known. In her crisis she had turned to him instinctively—his aloofness had left her more bewildered than ever.

Instead of taking a taxi, she decided to walk to Alexander Ladd's apartment. Strange, how stiff and unnatural her whole body felt, how numb were all her sensibilities. People passing her on the street stared but Sylvia was scarcely aware of them. The fact that Vance Ackerman was dead seemed a hideous lie . . . so recently and he been at her side that she could still, in imagination, hear every inflection of his voice . . . in her nostrils she could smell the cigarettes he had been smoking . . . could see the pinkish, well-fed jowls.

It was all over; everything was ended. The job that had given her a vivid taste of fashionable life was finished, obliterated in treacherous aching, helpless regret squeezed at her heart as she thought of her mother and father. They would be heart-broken, crushed with grief for their girl.

Whatever Vance Ackerman had deserved, it had not been death. He had made a fool of himself over a woman; his folly had assailed him and possessed him like a malignant disease, but there had been a hope, a possibility that he might be reclaimed.

But all of that was in the past. The cold hostile future was waiting for Sylvia to face it. A quivering tremor passed through her, an impulse of flight. Definitely, she experienced the sensation almost physical, of shrivelling courage. Like a frightened animal she wanted to hide, to disappear into the quickest avenue of obscurity, to escape and shut herself off from the galling scrutiny of the world.

Minacled and complex the tangled fires of distressed foreboding snarled in her breast, in her brain. But at the last, behind everything else, courage asserted itself. Physically, a little tightening of the jaws, something grim creeping into the baffled eyes. To grow hard was a necessity, the situation was hard . . . and Alexander Ladd was hard himself . . . like steel . . .

A uniformed doorman admitted her to his apartment building and she was immediately carried upward in his elevator to Ladd's private quarters. As in the Ackerman home, here, too, all was luxury. Money, she did something to people; it had done something to Sylvia.

Simplicity seemed to evaporate.

Until Ladd arrived she waited, uneasily, in a deeply comfortable living room; a Japanese servant placed silently, beside the divan, a small table with cigarettes in a square brass box. When he left the room he closed the thick door behind him —then next it was opened and Alexander Ladd himself entered the room. He had left his topcoat and hat in an outer room; he advanced to her, his dark eyes concentrated, his high cheek-bones more than ever giving a sternness to his rugged, handsome face.

"It's a mess—a hell of a mess," he said, abruptly. "The driver found Vance was dead; he rang the bell and the maid came down and identified the body. You'll have to tell me your story—the rock-bottom truth about everything that happened."

With a determination to omit nothing, she began at the overheard telephone call and went straight through, including the meeting with Stuart Gifford. There was, she decided, no adequate reason to withhold his name; in any case he was involved in only the slightest, most harmless, manner.

Ladd absorbed her story calmly. It was just as accident that Margot Liggett and you and Vance happened to be in Colonel Bailey's?" he asked. That, Sylvia said, was true as far as she knew. "Jack Liggett, telephoning Bailey's and learning that his wife and Vance were both there assumed they were together—in defiance of his threat to Vance," Ladd said, quietly, to himself than to Sylvia. "He was probably inflamed with booze; he waited outside across the street. Then, as though he saw Vance come out and put Margot in a taxicab. Then he followed. Yes, that seems to be the truth."

Ladd sat down and lit a cigarette. His presence, something coldly logical in his personality, began slowly to restore Sylvia's nerves. "What had I better do?" she asked, with a feeling that his advice would unquestionably be correct.

"You had better, first of all, realize that you are in an awkward situation," he said. "Get that through your head and set yourself for a tough time. Your story about Jack Liggett's threat may or may not stand up. He may have an alibi. Off hand I should say it appeared almost as a certainty, that you stabbed Vance Ackerman to death yourself."

Sylvia felt herself, suddenly, grow cold.

"You don't believe I did it!" she gasped.

Ladd assured her he believed nothing of the kind. "But the police might," he added. "Your disappearance from the taxi leaving Vance wounded inside might be hard to explain. Of course people who know Vance Ackerman would easily understand how his fondness for chivalry would operate—but he actually put you under suspicion. All in all, quite a case could be built up against you by an able prosecutor. You were out with a married man had been drinking together. I don't say you could be convicted—but you might be indicted. I dislike the whole business, and I'm mixed up in it."

A belted fire got into Sylvia's eyes "Do you think I like it myself?" she demanded. "Stuart Gifford ran for cover and now—and now—" Her voice faltered.

"You misunderstand me," Alexander Ladd said, quietly. "I dislike it all, but I am not going to run for cover. There is probably no more selfish man alive than I am. Ordinarily, I have no sympathy what ever with the follies of my friends With Joyce and Vance it is some what different. I tried to help them but help was impossible. In making the attempt I involved you in the web. I got you into it, and I am going to get you out of it. You are a beautiful, helpless young thing and I am sorry to say, you have become my responsibility. When or how that responsibility will end I have no idea."

Alexander Ladd picked up the telephone and called police headquarters.

Waiting for True Love -:- -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

SHE SEEKS LOVE IN EACH MEETING

IT WAS WORTH WHILE TO WAIT

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"SINCERE" writes: "I am a girl of eighteen, not bad looking, and considered sensible. I seem to be 'different' from other girls.

"I simply can't bear the sight of a young man who takes a girl out just for the sake of petting. I would sooner stay home and read a good book than go out with some young man I don't care about or one who hasn't any common sense.

"I'm often asked to go out, but I generally refuse, as I'm very particular. I have a number of admirers and I'm respected. But when a young man takes me out, he very seldom invites me the second time, because I refuse to be treated the modern free way.

"I'm always praying that I may find real, true love—love which is unselfish, noble and strong.

"I believe that a person usually gets what he is hoping and trying to get. What do you think?"

I agree with you, dear "Sincere." We usually get, sooner or later, what we want, if we honestly, whole-heartedly want it and do all we can do to make our dream come true.

Do not be discouraged. We hear much about married unhappiness, but after all, the average woman finds content and joy through love and marriage. You have every chance of realizing your longing for happy love and marriage provided you continue to be very particular, as all as lovable and winsome.

If my correspondence indicates anything at all, it goes to prove that there are today, vast numbers of young men and girls with old-fashioned ideals and principles in addition to their modern ways and progressive outlook—girls and young men who combine the best of the old with the best of the new.

'Where's Emily?'; Witness Tells of Finding Diamonds

hands, and a mingled expression of scorn, pity and mirth on his swarthy countenance the Hindu shrugged his speaking shoulders and gave the impression that Emily was just about the worst ever.

But Pete Gibby's temper was under his own control. This was no time to pick a quarrel. He must be put in his right place, Pete saw that, but just now it was nearing the time for the inquest, and they must soon be starting.

So Pete walked away, leaving Nell to her tete-a-tete.

He ran into Abel Collins, who paused to talk to him.

"Lord bustman," said the older man, his mild blue eyes full of pain "Lindy is my godchild, my darling I am as fond of her as if she were my own kin. Where is she, young Gibby?"

"I wish I knew, Mr. Collins. Do you think her disappearance and Mrs. Pennington's death are in any way connected?"

"I hope not," said Abel Collins, gravely.

"Why?"

"I don't know—I don't know. Let's not discuss it until after this inquest. Why an inquest at all, I can't see!"

And then the people came from their homes, ready for the inquest.

"I'm not going," Rodney had declared. "I shall stay here in case Emily returns. If they want to ask me any questions, let them do it over the telephone. Of course, if I'm subpoenaed I'll go over, but in that case Aunt Judy, you must come home. One of us must be here all the time."

"I don't think they'll want you, Rod," Lamb told him. "I think I can explain your absence."

The court went through preliminaries with gravity and dispatch The police he admitted confessed that they had no witnesses, weapon, clues, evidence, criminal suspect, or even certainty of a crime.

But, they averred, there was an unexplained death, and inquiry into it must be made.

Sergeant Murdock, who had discovered the body, told his story first.

"You thought the bridge rail was broken, did you?" asked the court.

"I did, sir, at first. But I found afterward that 'twas only the vines as was broken and tangled."

"Badly broken and tangled?"

"Very bad," sir.

"More pulled about than would be likely if one person had gone over that rail?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, would you say there had been another person present at the breaking and tangling of those vines?"

Now Murdock was far from shrewd, but he began to see the drift of these questions.

"No, sir, I wouldn't go so far as to say that. It might have been done by one person."

"I see."

After Murdock came Johnson, with his statement of finding the fur scarf at the place where the body had lain and of scrambling up when he climbed the steep side of the ravine.

"It was just at the place where you found the lady?"

"Yes, sir."

"Would you say it had been under the body?"

"That I can't say, sir."

"I see." The terrible finality of the court's declaration of his powers of vision, or some other influence, seemed to disturb greatly the climber, Johnson, for he trembled and bit his lips and clenched his hands, and looked generally upset.

"What's the matter, man?" said the court, not unkindly. Then, with a flash of divination, he said:

"Did you find anything else?

"No—no, sir."

"You did," returned Winston, calmly. "What was it?"

"I don't—"

"Don't lie, my boy, or you'll be in deep trouble. What else did you find?"

Whoever expected or wanted a thrill from the proceedings received it now.

"This, sir." The trembling fingers of young Johnson slipped into his pocket and he drew forth a glittering object which he handed over to his interlocutor.

It was a short chain of six diamonds, not very large, but pure, flawless stones.

Now to the court this was a surprise, a startling occurrence and of great interest, but it told him nothing further.

To those who knew Emily Deane and knew of Rodney's gift to her, it was a thunderbolt.

Neil put her hands across her mouth to keep from screaming. Betty gripped the sides of her chair to keep from fainting. And Aunt Judy—Neil sat immovable as a statue, showing no emotion, save for the face that all the luster had suddenly left her great black eyes.

Pete Gibby felt as if some one had slipped a chunk of ice down his back.

Jim Pennington sat gazing at the thing with a numb, dumb horror.

He had braced himself to stand the trying ordeal he was going through and was quite ready, when the time came, to tell of his wife's doings the day before.

Tomorrow—The finding in the death of Polly Pennington.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Are You Engaged?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three years old I have been married and have a little boy. I am deeply in love with a young man about one year older than I am. He seems very much in love with me. He is good to me in every possible way.

His mother wants to meet me, but I am worried because I have not told him yet that I have been married and have a little boy. I kept putting off telling him, because I was afraid he would not like it.

He knows I am keeping something from him, and seems to think I have another sweetheart. I am so worried I cry, then he is still more suspicious. What shall I do about this, please? WORRIED.

Had your friend asked you to marry him? Are you engaged to him? If so, you should tell him the truth at once about your former marriage and the little boy. This is only fair. He will have to know some time, if you were married. If he really loves you, he will love your child for your sake. But there is no reason why you should confide all the details of your past life to him, unless he has proposed and you wish to marry him.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and my sister is nearing twenty. I am sure you will agree with me that we should have friends and go out just as others do. But my parents are very strict and we are deprived of all pleasures.

I do not think this is fair. We have talked matters over with them, but in vain. Evenings, we must stay home, and afternoons, if we want to go out our parents come along. We are not allowed even to have girl friends.

I am beginning to think we will have to go out against their wishes. I do not see any other way. Please tell me what to do. TROUBLED.

YOUR strict home life is most unusual in this day and age, my dear. But until you are legally of age and earning your own living—in fact, as long as you live under the protection of your parents' roof —they are morally and legally responsible for you, and they have the authority to govern your social and home life.

You know they love you and have your good at heart. So try to be patient.

At least you are not wrecking the health and happiness of future years by dissipation, reckless living and late hours as so many flappers do. Some day you may devoutly thank your parents for their watchful care over you

Are you preparing to earn your own living? When you go out into the world you will have more outside life, necessarily. As you grow older, doubtless, your parents will expect you to entertain and accept invitations from congenial young people. For certainly you need the companionship of girls and young men of your own age.

Correct Manners

Setting a Table

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please instruct me in the general ideas of setting a table? I have just been married, and I am being my own "maid." Before my marriage I lived at home, and, as we had a large family and no service, my mother had to get on as best she could with service that she knew was not careful, but she realized that she had no time for "style." Now I want to start my home right, if I can, and I am making every effort to learn what (as you so often say) in table-setting. And please let me thank you for your constant help to me, through your column. T. H.

HOW I welcome questions like this, my dear friend, and how happy it will make me to help you start the new home right!

There are certain rules for table setting which, if followed, will be the basis being that will always make your table right. First figure out the reasonableness of the correct way to place your silver. Place only the pieces needed for the menu that you intend to serve Don't carelessly place several pieces of silver and allow the guests to "help themselves." Of course, if you can arrange to bring in the silver for the dessert course, it is far better not to place the dessert-silver when the other silver is placed.

Next, in placing the silver, observe the sequence in which it is to be used. The diner expects to find furthest from the plate the piece of silver to be used first. That is, he "begins on the outside of the plate and works toward the plate."

Next, remember that, since knives are held in the right hand, they are placed on the right of the plate. Spoons too, are placed on the right of the plate But forks since they are taken up with the left hand are placed on the left of the plate However, sometimes the oyster fork is an exception, although it may be placed on either the right of the knives or the left of the forks depending on which side it balances better. Or the oyster fork may be brought in with the oysters as they are served

Remember to place the knives on the table with the cutting edge toward the plate. The spoons should be placed with the bowl up. The fork should be placed with the tines up.

Place all the silver pieces, the linen and the dishes one inch from the edge of the table, first because they look better, and second because it prevents their being jostled off the table. The alignment of the silver should be perfect—it should be parallel, one inch from the edge of the table, and all ending on a straight line drawn from the farthest spoon to the farthest fork.

Now keep in mind the rule that all lines must be lengthwise or crosswise but never diagonal. So when you place next your bread-and-butter plate (if you are using one) you place it to the left of the plate and at the tip of the forks The butter-spreader or, if it should be placed parallel to the edge of the table, with the handle toward the right. On the right of the plate, balancing the bread-and-butter plate, is placed the water glass or goblet, at the tip of the knife

Another straight line is obtained when you place the napkin. It is placed on the left of the plate with the hem and selvedge parallel to the edge of the table and the forks. The lower right hand corner is the open corner.

Anticipating Autumn—Many of the advance showings are featuring crepe faille or satin frocks in tones of matching cashmere or broadcloth. Navy, deep green rich brown, purple and gray promise to be the leading colors of the coming season, but black bids fair to continue foremost in the mode.

Keep Face Young And Attractive

To remove sunburn, tan, freckles or any complexion difficulty, it is always best to remove the outer layer of aged, withered or wrinkled scarf skin Smart women do it easily, quickly and harmlessly by the application of pure mercolized wax. The skin peels off, a little each day until the entire defective mask is removed, gradually bringing the new layer into view. The new skin is attractive, soft, clear, and the face is much younger looking. At all drug stores and beauty counters with full directions. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty.

MAURINE LOSES ROY

Date Cites ... Another Thumbing I... Review of Elsa Wheeler ... Name

Maurine flickered for weeks awhile a flock of ghostly thoughts, like phantom birds, flit (of flit) through the chambers of her heart, or perched with folded wings, silently, upon the voiceless strings, that once resounded to Hope's happy days.

She certainly was feeling low, and so passed the ever-changing April days, when May came lightsome-footed o'er the lea. Maurine "turned her wan face toward the sea." Accompanied by Aunt Ruth and Roy, her cox, she went to Europe.

She—

And gained the grand epitome of knowledge."

While—
"... Roy,
Lingered in Scotland with his new-found joy.
A dainty little lassie, Grace Kildare,
With health and vim and flossy flaxen hair."

So now we leave Maurine, sitting at the window, while her tears spatter the pavement below, and run in rivulets down to the sea. But—there on wave, Maurine still smiles behind the mist.

"Fancy work," we calls it.

I am employed by the city to superintend street repairs, and, if I do say it myself, I take considerable pride in my work. Recently I offered to take several city officials on a tour of inspection. EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON AUGUST 26, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

First Pity, Then Embrace

First We Shudder, Then We Do It

THIS LADY STARTED IT. BOTH SHUDDERED

YOU KNOW POPE'S OLD VERSES.

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

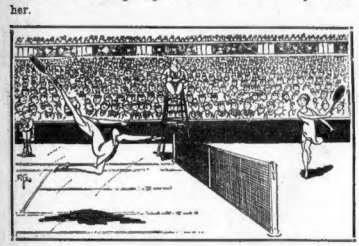
Wise is the man who said, "It's the first step that counts." He was a Frenchman, and put it, "Il m'y a que le premier pas qui comte."

It took courage to eat the first oyster. Now everybody eats oysters when there is an "R" in the month. It required great courage in Blériot to make the first flight across the English Channel, about twenty-five miles. Now everybody seems to want to fly across the Atlantic Ocean.

The lady required courage, or something worse—especially if she was past fifty—that wore skirts above her knees and flesh-colored stockings. Now everybody does it.

A clever British artist named Fitz shows in the two pictures on this page how the first step comes and then the other steps afterwards.

You see a lady of the old style excited at a tennis game, actually revealing her leg ALMOST to the knee. The scorekeeper falls off his seat and sensibility almost faints. But that passes off. And then Mademoiselle Longlen, earnest French tennis genius, doing things with both legs that no squirrel could do. And after her comes the flapper, whose whole life is one long "leg exhibition." And nobody notices her.



THE MODERN GIRL. NOW EVERY ONE DOES IT, AND TAKES IT FOR GRANTED

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the "first step" pioneers to show us that things can be done, not only as Christopher Columbus and Lindbergh showed us, but as the young lady in the silk knees and diminutive skirt shows us.

To get rid of old ideas after they are worn out and have answered their purpose is almost as important as getting rid of dead tissue.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine minds out of one thousand are in a rut and stay in a rut. That is the easiest thing to do. Occasionally man gets out of the rut, as when, for instance, Fulton's first steamboat was laughed at and he was called a fool, or as the young lady did when she located her skirt north of her knees.

Sometimes it is overdone, especially by the young ladies. But in the long run the NEW thing proves to be the GOOD thing.

We have got rid of skirts that drag in microbes from the sidewalk into the house; we have got rid of long hair, revealing the beautiful outline of the female head. In all directions there is improvement.

Courteous

Uncle Sam Eases Taxpayers' Minds

A very praiseworthy innovation has been introduced by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which collects our income taxes.

They have sent letters to 3,500,000 makers of income tax returns, notifying them that their statements have been accepted as correct.

That will bring peace of mind to three and a half million taxpayers relieved of the uncertainty as to whether they had properly filled out these complicated returns. Nobody likes to be in trouble with the Government.

Never before has the Bureau of Internal Revenue been able so promptly to audit 3,500,000 returns. Never before has it done this very courteous thing of notifying the people who were found O. K.

GETTING A SOLID BASIS OF MONEY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It was announced the other day that the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany sat around a table at Washington for the first time in history to consider international finance.

There was the President of the Bank of England and of the Reichs Bank of Germany, the Deputy Governor of the Bank of France, the acting Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and the Governor of the New York Reserve Bank.

Their efforts were supposed to be in the interests of stabilization. They considered proposals for dealing with the inter-allied war debts and other world financial problems.

To a man up a tree the wonder is that they did not address themselves to the most interesting and vital problem today in the world, which is the stabilization of the currency by placing it upon some other basis than that of gold.

There may be technical difficulties in the way of this and doubtless there are. Everybody who attacks the problem seems to be defeated.

Earnest efforts have been made by Irving Fisher, a professor of Yale, in this direction. Others have called attention to the necessity for it.

Gold is at present the only practical basis for the currency. Gold is accepted as such because it is a universally prized article and reasonably stable.

But the gold supply of the world is precarious, to say the least, and it is not a human necessity, particularly.

The human race needs clothing and food. These are the principal necessities of life, and in every country in the world they come from about the same sources.

Why could not there be a balanced dollar resting on a basis of cotton and wool in the way of clothing, and rice, corn and wheat or potatoes in the way of food?

When one of these necessities goes up in price the others come down, so that the teeter board is reasonably stable.

When gold goes up everything comes down and when everything come up gold goes down.

It looks as if the combined expert intelligence of the leaders of the world, such as were represented at the conference at Washington, should be able to devise some solid basis for money.

A currency could be issued based upon this and be universally acceptable. As it is at present, stability of currency is the great desideratum. Every kind of business needs it. The whole world cries for it. It does not look like an unrealizable dream and the world lays this problem before its gathered representatives.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

GOVERNOR FULLER'S oldest son, Alvan T., Jr., has a nickname that bids fair to stick to him through the years. It is "Persh." It all started when the young chap was here worshipping General Pershing and telling his folks that when he grew up he was going to be a general.

GEORGE A. LOVELAND, meteorologist at the local U. S. Weather Bureau, is called upon frequently to answer questions not strictly associated with his work. A few days ago an unidentified Boston business man called the bureau by telephone and informed Forecaster Loveland that having only one pair of rubbers he was unable to determine whether to keep them at home or in the office. The Weather Man, taking the problem under advisement, delved through a mass of musty records in his office and emerged with data sufficient to convince the caller that he ought to buy another pair of rubbers as it rains as frequently on incoming commuters as it does on those homeward bound.

Friends of DEPUTY U. S. MARSHAL EVERETT PEVEAR are urging him to put on public display his gallery of ship models, constructed by him over the past several years at his East Lynn home. All the models are built strictly to scale and range from the New Bedford whalers to trim racing craft of the America's Cup class.

Once a farmer always a farmer. Ever since FRANCIS W. ALDRICH, member of the Governor's Council, sold his estate in West Springfield for a golf course he has been pining to get back to the soil. While looking over an old place in GRANBY the other day, Aldrich made a casual offer which was immediately snapped up. So he's happy again. "Going to paint the buildings red," he declared. "Always has been a lucky color for me."

Souvenirs of his European trip, in the form of gloves and neckties, were distributed among the members of the Governor's Council by LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR FRANK G. ALLEN. The Lieutenant-Governor knows good gloves when he sees them, being in the leather business.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A READER has sent me this question:

"If you had the power to establish a new, ideal plan for marriage, what plan would you suggest?"

That's easy. I wouldn't suggest any plan.

Why not? Because history has proved that it isn't the PLAN that counts in marriage, it's the PERFORMANCE.

It has always been possible for humans to marry in any one of a thousand ways. It is still possible. Right here in the United States in the year 1927, you can pick your own marriage ceremony. You can be married with prayers and parades and live in all the exclusive intimacy of a harem if you so desire. Or you can grab off a couple of witnesses, inform them that you're henceforth man and wife and thereafter week-end together, if that's your preference. Either plan results in legal matrimony. But whether it results in happiness or misery—THAT'S UP TO YOU.

For marriage isn't what the judge or the lecturer or the priest or the pastor makes it—marriage is what YOU make it.

It isn't a question of single or twin beds—easy or hard divorces—all-time or part-time wedlock—community property or one-way bank books—or any other contriving of relationships. It's simply a question of whether two people are going to act kind or cussed.

Nor will any possible reformation or rearrangement of marriage plans help them in this matter. If you really want to be kind you can be as kind under the most antiquated marriage plan as under the most modern easy-come-easy-go companionate scheme. And if you are bent on being cussed, all the certificates and ceremonies on earth won't curb your propensities.

Now that's a simple statement.

We see it demonstrated every day of our lives.

Surely we should be able to realize and accept it.

But we won't.

We persist in thinking that there's some ideal Marriage scheme which will automatically insure us against disillusion or unhappiness—some mysterious marital alchemy which will turn our human dross to gold and make us live together like cherubim and seraphim.

There isn't. We'll never have Ideal Marriages until we have Ideal Humans which won't be for some time yet.

What an amount of misery and rebellion and resentment we'd save ourselves if we'd accept that fact, cut out our romantic reconstructing and get down to brass tacks!
